CHIROPRACTIC VIEWPOINT:
NERVOUS TENSION
"Nervous Tension" is a common complaint in our fast moving world. Hustle, bustle, worry and just plain fitters take their toll in the form of numerous types of physical inco-ordination.
Yet, there are those individuals who apparently are not affected by the fast tempo of daily events; who can face any situation and "take it in stride". These are people who enjoy normal function.
By maintaining high thresholds of resistance they are able to adjust themselves to the hustle and bustle of modern living. Chiropractic care helps the body maintain normal function by keeping nerve pathways free from the interference of pressure, and that is the reason that many people with nervous disorders find that Chiropractic helps them — even when all other methods have failed.
The Chiropractic patient need not expect startling results from reduction of nerve interference by manipulative adjustments, unless he is willing to abide by the simple common-sense rules of normal living. These include a normal intake of good food, a normal amount of exercise, and most important . . . a normal amount of rest and relaxation.

CEDAR GROVE
Christmas music piped into the evening air greeted those attending the Zion concert before they even entered the church. Once inside very little people jumped around the stage with teddy bears, not so little ones sang us a Mary Poppins' special, there were plays by the TYROS, four boys and a very amusing shadow-play presented by some of the bigger boys. There was a candy-cane drill, lots of recitations and solos both piano and voice and Barbara Sedgewick even played her accordion. Marlion McCowan led the carols and Lola Reesor sang some folk songs, Frankie Crichton gave us some excerpts from Pinnaflore. The climax of the concert was the Story of Silent Night read by Bill Butcher and sung by 24 girls in the senior and intermediate classes. Under Evelyn Whitmore's direction took us beautifully through the musical history of this lovely old carol . . . and then came Santa Claus. And that is how Christmas started in Cedar Grove.
And people did things: Charlie Booth, Ethel Smith, Norma Cornelius and Lloyd Clendennen won turkeys bowling and Dick Dare and Lillian Dean took home hams while nuts went to Marg Walton and Bob Lapp. Ruby Reesor sat through the Christmas concert this year. Most of us do but for Ruby it was the first time. She helped with the planning and then a bad back kept her out of the production . . . so it was a seat in the audience for Ruby this year. The Booths had a harvest of 200 lemons from their spectacular lemon tree . . . some weighing two pounds. Grampa Dare celebrated his 80th birthday.
Still in a festive mood John and Bea Petrie hosted about 24 members of the Community Club at a supper party on Monday evening. After a delicious dinner and a very brief meeting, the members had a marvelous time playing Court Whist.

It is too bad that we have to report a fire to close out this old year. On Monday, about supper time, the Little's second house, occupied by the Hoeyes caught fire and extensive damage was done to the roof and 2nd floor.
