A Mennonite Viewpoint

The Christian and his Family

What will be the future of your children in terms of this life and eternity? One mother, confused by conflicting opinions but concerned that her children develop Christian character turned in desperation to the Lord asking for a divine pattern to accomplish this. The Lord gave her the assurance that the Bible was the infallible guidebook for both parent and child.

The Bible says, "Train up a child in the way he should go and when he is old he will not depart from it." The Christian parents, who follow these instructions and commit themselves to the task, can be confident that God will do his part.

Training involves teaching and discipline. Parents, therefore, having experienced God's forgiveness and grace in Christ, will deal with children harshly but in a spirit of love. The Bible, studied as a family, becomes an authoritative guide for life. Firm and loving discipline helps mould godly character.

God heurours the faith of parents who recognize their own deficiencies and daily seek God's guidance and wisdom in behalf of their family.
