START ANNUALS INDOORS DURING EARLY SPRING

Annuals may be classified into two groups, hardy and half-hardy annuals. The hardy annuals are grown from seeds sown out-of-doors and the half-hardy annuals are sown indoors in early spring and are transplanted outdoors after the danger of frost is over. Many of them, such as petunia and verbena, must be started inside to give them the required length of growing season for bloom production.

Horticulturists with the Ontario Department of Agriculture recommend sowing seeds of most half-hardy annuals from now onwards. To produce a short, sturdy plant do not sow the seed too early; most of them should not be sown until early April. Rapid growers such as zinnias and cosmos should not be sown until late April.

Sow different kinds in separate containers to make transplanting easy and efficient. Containers such as 6-inch seed pans or 3-inch pots should be large enough to start sufficient seedlings for normal sized gardens.

Use a soil mixture consisting of 7 parts loam, 3 parts peat and 2 parts sand. Add about 2 ounces of superphosphate or a complete fertilizer such as 5-10-5 to each bushel of mixture. It is advisable to sift the mixture through a 1/4-inch sieve to remove rough, lumpy materials.

Sow the seeds and cover lightly with the soil mixture. Water with a fine spray to avoid uncovering the seeds. An alternative method of watering is to place the pot 3/4 of its depth in water until the soil surface darkens, then remove the pot and allow to drain. Glass or plastic may be placed over the container to conserve moisture and lessen the need for watering. Shade from direct sun until the first seedlings appear, then remove the covers and shading.

Transplant the seedlings into flats when they begin to develop their first true leaves. Use the same soil mixture as recommended above and space the transplants about 2 inches apart. To keep them short and sturdy, place the seedlings in a well-lighted location. Keep the soil evenly moist, and to reduce damping-off disease, water early in the day so that foliage is dry before nightfall.

Annuals should not be set out until the danger of frost is past. To acclimatize the plants to outdoor conditions, set the flats outside a week or more before planting out, and if frost threatens, cover them with burlap or other protective material at night.

Dr. Boehmer is a graduate of the Moody Bible Institute, Chicago. He has held pastorates in Waterloo and Toronto, Calvary Church in Toronto, of which he was pastor gained wide recognition for the expansion of its Missionary Program and Sunday School organization during his fourteen years there.

Dr. Boehmer has served on numerous missionary councils and has travelled widely as a missionary statesman. He is well qualified to speak on the subject of World Missions today. All are invited to hear him at 11:00 a.m. and 7:30 p.m. Guest soloist in the morning service will be Mrs. Floyd Donner from Oshawa and in the evening Mr. LeRoy Soper from Stouffville will be the soloist.

Dixie Dean Coming To Markham

Mr. Dixie Dean, one of the outstanding accordionists of our day will be playing in the Markham United Missionary Church on Wednesday, April 14th at 8 p.m. He will also be speaking in this mid-week service which is part of the Annual Missionary Conference of the Church.

Mr. Dean was a professional accordionist at the age of 14. For twenty years he was with the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation and had written and played music for the National Film Board. He was the first charter member of the Canadian Teachers' Accordionist Association. That organization has been given their Government Charter, the first in the world. During World War II Mr. Dean served in the Canadian Navy as a wireless operator for 2 1/2 years and then was with the Canadian Navy Show during which time he played before the King and Queen and the two princesses.

However it is not because of these accomplishments that Dixie Dean is being brought to the United Missionary Church. It is because of his service as a Christian Missionary. After the War he became a Christian, attended and graduated from the Toronto Bible College, and then went to serve with the World Radio Missionary Fellowship, Inc. in Ecuador, South America. There with radio station HCJB, the "Voice of the Andes" he was program director. This missionary radio station is heard by short wave around the world.

Mr. Dean will in this service, not only be playing his accordion several times, but will be speaking and telling of the missionary activities of the World Radio Missionary Fellowship. Everyone is most cordially invited to this Wednesday evening service.
