Where Life Is Won By Skill

In the past ten years surgery has made normal life possible for countless children, especially infants who previously were doomed to death or physical handicaps. But heart and brain operations, as well as numerous other surgical procedures, such as numerous orthopedic problems like congenitally dislocated hips, create a special problem. This is the task of bringing the patients through the after-operation crises. In children, this is far more difficult than in adults. To cope with it, intensive-care wards, adjacent to the operating-rooms, are essential. The scene above is one corner of such a ward in The Hospital for Sick Children. Last year the hospital added many new operating-rooms to its facilities and performed 15,173 operations. Now it must expand its seriously overcrowded special care areas. This is only one of the projects in its $29,226,498 five-year expansion and renovation program. The hospital seeks $13,900,000 in public assistance to complete this work and contributions will be gratefully welcomed by The Hospital for Sick Children Fund, 105 Adelaide st. w., Toronto.

For such a little time!

She's very busy discovering that a reflection in a mirror is not another playmate. She'll learn quickly, and all too soon she'll be discovering school and then boys and before you know it she'll be leading her own life. Meanwhile, thanks to her Dad's foresight, she — and her brothers and sisters — can count on Sun Life protection and a college education. If her mother and father have anything to do with it, their young miss will grow up with every possible advantage.
