Bill Crothers Flashes To Victory Before 20,000 Fans

Twenty thousand wildly cheering fans, including many from the Markham-Stouffville area gave their hero, Bill Crothers a standing ovation on Thursday evening at Varsity Stadium following his spectacular race victory over New Zealand's Peter Snell. Bill is pictured here as he crosses the finish line with Snell about two yards behind.

McLean Ignites Jr. Offensive With 350' Home Run Blast

Contrary to last week when Stouffville nipped Peterborough 2.1, the Juniors lowered the proverbial boom Sunday and swamped the Pete's 13-5. However, it wasn't as easy as the score might indicate.

It took the home-town Juniors seven innings before they let loose, scoring a barrage of runs. To that point, the score had been tied 5.5.

Catcher, Barry McLean started the fire when he blasted a home run out of the park. The ball orbited left field and was recovered some 350 feet down range. However, the bases were empty and his efforts merely batters. broke the deadlock. Dave Slack got on with a double, followed by Mike Cadieux, Ken Aida, Bill Lehman, Bob Wagg, Ron Castle, and Jerry Lewis. In all, six runs were scored, giving Peterboro ample reason to pack their bags and leave quietly.

To make sure Peterborough wouldn't stage a come back, Stouffville added two more runs June 20 to 24.

Jim Rehill, Teacher and Friend

He should have been a Minister. He should have studied in Theology in University. He should have passed grade 13 algebra. But, he didn't. And, as a result, he has become one of the best Physical Education teachers Stouffville District High School has ever had.

He is James Rehill, teacher and friend of several hundred students that have passed under his guidance since 1958.

But, in reality, he shouldn't even be here. Jim, barely through being a student himself at 31, was team were Mable Watts and born in Collingwood. He attended high school in Midland, where he missed his algebra. As a result, he was unable to enter the Ministerial College he had planned to attend, and took second choice, by applying at McMaster in Hamilton.

He thought he would stay a year in the steel city, then re-Bacon and Elinor Crossen. Ray | turn to Toronto and try at the College again. However, McMaster proved to be what he wanted in a school, and he requested permission to stay on.

For his first three years at McMaster, Jim undertook parttime work for the YMCA. He still didn't have any idea that he would teach physical education. Half way through his third year, he was asked by a Director of the 'Y' to accept a position on the staff. Jim agreed and went to camp with a group of boys. It was there he decided 'Y' work was not for him. He found the pay low, and the hours long. Pioneer Student McMaster, always willing to keep up with other universities decided that it was time to teach Physical Education. They started the course in 1957 with six students. Jim Rehill was one of them. "We were the guinea pigs," he said. "We pioneered the

He came through with flying colours. Following graduation, Jim began the task of landing a permanent teaching position. He drafted seven forms to different schools, and sent a letter to Stouffville.

Where's Stouffville ?

The letter, he decided, would be a last resort in case the seven, neatly-typed forms failed to respond for him. "I didn't even know where Stouffville was. I had heard of it a couple of times, but couldn't tell anyone how to get there." Stouffville District High School answered his letter, and following a personal interview he had decided three things. It was a challenge; physical education could be better; and he respected Mr. Duxbury, the principal. With this in mind, he ac-

He has changed the attitude of the sports-minded at the school. When he arrived, he found the students with an inferiority complex. When they competed, they would go out to lose, he said, but now they're out there to win, and are pretty disappointed when they don't. Jim explained that the students in 1958 thought they were pretty good, but, he found out, they had hardly been out of the immediate area to compete.

He arranged out-of-town competition for them, and when they saw how good everyone else was, it took the wind out of their sails. They settled down after discovering they weren't the best in the country.

Today, they're still not the best in the country, but they are much better. Mr. Rehill has given them the incentive and instruction and in the past seven years, it has been paying off.

Only three records remain unbroken since 1958. The rest have all tumbled while he has been on the staff. Jim starts off the physical education season with football, then carries on with volleyball, basketball, gymnastics, badminton, and track and field. It takes some doing to keep up with the rules to all those

Besides physical education, he also teaches Music and Health. He has taught English. Jim gives up evenings, weekends, and a good portion of his spare time to help the students advance in their sports. People say it must be nice to get two months off in the summer. People don't realize, however, that two months barely covers all the extra time he donates. Perfect Track Size

The image, imprinted on this writer's mind of a physical education teacher being a 6' 5", 200 pound strapping giant, was soon forgotten after seeing Jim Rehill.

Short, only 5' 7", and light, a mere 133 pounds, Jim describes himself as being 'the perfect track size.' Size and weight Hobbs as the guest speaker. mean nothing, though, if you are able to carry out your assign-said. "I have my hands full, and have no desire to move on." Jim expressed a desire to obtain a Masters Degree in Physical Education, but has no immediate plans regarding it.

Students Like Sons Jim gets a personal feeling of pride and satisfaction watching his students excel in their respective sports. "They're like sons to me," he commented, "they grow up, they get better, and I feel good knowing I've had a part in; it." He was thrilled to hear that two of his students have expressed desires to teach Physical Education.

Comments from other coaches mean a lot to Jim Rehill. Speaking on how well a student plays a game, is the same as saying the coach has done a good job instructing him.

To some of the students, Jim is more a friend than a teacher. He'll take part in their pastime sports, teach them the more intricate motions, and be an all-round 'good buddy.'

However, being a good buddy doesn't mean the students

The academic regulation regarding sports, although dying in most Ontario communities, is still upheld at Stouffville District.
