To Tender For Jail Farm

The City of Toronto, which once turned down an offer of $2,000 an acre for the 760-acre Langstaff jail farm has put the farm on the block again and this time is asking for $3,000,000. The farm will be sold by tender with the highest bidder paying $500,000 down and the balance over five years.

However, Markham Township which receives $4,200 annually from the city in lieu of taxes for the farm, will not be one of the bidders.

Deputy-reeve Stewart Rumble said he didn't feel the township should compete for the land. However, Markham would still have some right over controlling its development because of its zoning. Although not zoned by by-law, the land is shown as industrial on the official plan with some residential on the north-east corner.

The jail farm will be serviced by the township from the John Street sewage plant, for which the city paid $150,000 toward its cost. It is already serviced with water.

The property which is located north of Highway 7 and east of Yonge Street was acquired by the city shortly after World War I and rented to the province during World War II as a mental hospital when the province took over the mental home at St. Thomas as an air force base.

The province held on to the farm until 1957 when the city finally took it over again with the idea of "using it to" relieve pressure at Don Jail.

"Mary" said her mother reprovingly, "every time you are naughty, I get another grey hair."

"Gee, Mom, you must have been a terror when you were young—just look at Grandma."

Entomology is the science which deals with insects; etymology is the science of words.

Young Harry: "Father what's the difference between a gun and a machine gun?"

Dad: "There is a big difference. It is just as if I spoke and then your mother spoke."
