The Canada Pension Plan "A HARD FIGHT ... BUT WE GOT IT"

JOHN H. ADDISON

No matter what your occupation, you can now look forward to a respectable pension benefit . . . brought about by farsighted Liberal MP's like John Addison. The Canada Pension Plan is financially sound and partially funded at the request of all the provinces.

Mary, a secretary, makes $4200 a year. She'll retire on $162.50 a month, including $75.00 old age security.

Steve, a construction worker, makes $5200 a year. His retirement pension will be $179 each month, including old age security...

Fred farms 160 acres for a living. He can look forward to about $185 retirement income per month.

These are only a few examples.

The Canada Pension Plan is one of the most progressive pieces of social legislation since Confederation. It is individually portable anywhere in Canada. It brings retirement, disability, widow and death benefits to all Canadians and their families ... provides security for the future.

FIRST, OLD AGE PENSIONS

John Addison recognized the need for decent pension security long before he was elected by the voters of York North. He strongly supported the Liberal government's move to increase old age security to $7.5 available progressively at age 65. This was the first step toward his goal.

A TOUGH FIGHT

A portable contributory pension plan for all Canadians was the next step. But it was indeed a long hard fight to accomplish it.

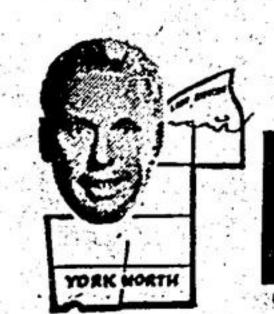

A co-operative effort of vast proportion with all provinces was essential. John Addison worked closely with the Honourable Judy LaMarsh, Minister of National Health and Welfare, to make this possible. An amendment to Canada's constitution was necessary to clear the way for effective operation of the Canada Pension Plan. John Addison supported and actively worked to help pass the necessary amendments.

But when the bill itself was put before parliament, the toughest battle began. Partisan political advantage beckoned the Diefenbaker Party, in fact all opposition parties, to create endless delay. Every tactic possible was used to slow passage. With all this obstruction, the Canada Pension Plan finally became law and will begin operation January 1st, 1966:

AND NOW MEDICARE

John Addison and the Liberal Party need your vote for Medicare. A majority Liberal government is the only way to make Medicare a reality. It can be done. Your vote for John Addison . . . a majority government . . . is a vote for the future welfare of you and your family.
