Hydro's Uxbridge ROA 3,500 Farms In Centennial Competition

Ontario Hydro's Uxbridge Rural Operating Area will be gradually merged with the Commission's adjacent Rural Operating Areas.

It is anticipated that the transition will take place over a considerable period of time so that full advantage may be taken of changing circumstances as they occur and to cause the least possible disruption for staff members and customers.

In making this announcement, Adam S. Smith, the Commission's Central Region Manager, pointed out that this move is in keeping with the pattern gradually occurring throughout the Province, which at the end of this year will have resulted in the reduction from Ontario Hydro's original 105 Rural Operating Areas to a total of some 82 larger and more efficient organizations. This trend is saving millions of dollars. The amalgamation is being carried out so that more efficient use may be made of modern Hydro equipment, vehicles and work methods. Today's vastly improved roads and vehicles, coupled with modern communication make larger and more efficient Area organizations very feasible.

Mr. Smith said that until further notification Uxbridge rural customers will continue to receive service in the same manner as in the past.

"No, no!" exclaimed the mother hastily as her daughter, a new bride, started to cover her pantry shelves with newspapers. "Use leftover wallpaper, brown paper, paper bags, if you like — anything but newspapers!"

"Do you want everybody to know when you cleaned your shelves last?" inquired the experienced housewife.

Ontario farmers and their families, whether they reside in Algonia district in the north, the County of Prescott in the east, or Essex in the west, are making certain they have a very special part in Canada's Centennial Program.

Thirty-five hundred have entered their farms in a province-wide Farmstead Improvement Centennial Competition. The very moment the judge makes his first inspection, which is now underway, they will begin painting, repairing and dressing up their properties in readiness for the great event. A second inspection will be carried out in the fall of 1966 and the difference in the scores will be the basis used in determining the winners.

Lambton County has had the greatest response with 250 entries, followed by North, Cochrane with 190 and Algoma with 170. The winner in each county, at time of the second inspection, will be eligible for entry in a provincial competition. The top prize will be $529 and a championship trophy.

County farm organizations have worked closely with their Agricultural Representatives in procuring entries and arranging prizes in addition to those already being offered by the Ontario Department of Agriculture, County and Township Councils have indicated their support of these competitions and have expressed a keen interest in a general clean-up campaign.

For example, the County Council of Middlesex has invited farm organizations to co-operate in a Rural Landscape Improvement Program and has offered substantial prizes for the best work done. The Council has listed a number of projects ranging from removal of dead trees to screening of municipal dumps, junk yards, and car cemeteries. To insure that every municipality in Middlesex County has a suitable flag pole, the Council will make a special grant. The money spent on such projects by County Councils will earn a 50 per cent grant from the Ontario Department of Agriculture.

THE CHANGING CAR BUSINESS COMPLAINT DEPARTMENT

Of all the departments in an automobile dealership that make for its long range success, the most important is the only one without a manager. I refer to the 'bureau of beefs' — the Complaint Department.

It might seem that lack of complaints is an indication of a smoothly running enterprise. And this might be so to some extent if you consider only the big ones that are deemed important enough to get attention from a department manager or myself.

The complaints that worry me though are the little ones that the customer keeps to himself. Such irritations as a rattle that should have been fixed and wasn't, or a promise that was overlooked in the last minute rush to finish a job. They were just additional details at the time. They became important only because they WEREN'T attended to.

This is the kind of complaint that a customer is reluctant to mention because of its trivial nature. So instead he just keeps it to himself where it gradually blows up like a cake of yeast until it becomes a general feeling of dissatisfaction.

If there is one department that I am most concerned with of all in our dealership it is the Complaint Department. Should there be something you are not completely happy with in regard to our dealership, you would be doing us a kindness if you would bring it to my attention. There is nothing, however trivial or important, that two sensible people can't work out satisfactorily.

Liberal action for EDUCATION

"The incidence of juvenile delinquency is 10 times greater among high school drop-outs than among graduates. This must be corrected," said John Addison in his nomination speech, Sept. 22nd, 1965.

In 1964, the Liberal government extended family allowances to 16 and 17 year-olds who continue in school. The same Liberal government made interest free loans, in the first year of operation (1964/65), to 42,500 university students.

Prime Minister Pearson has announced a $40 million university scholarship program to be introduced when a Liberal government is re-elected.

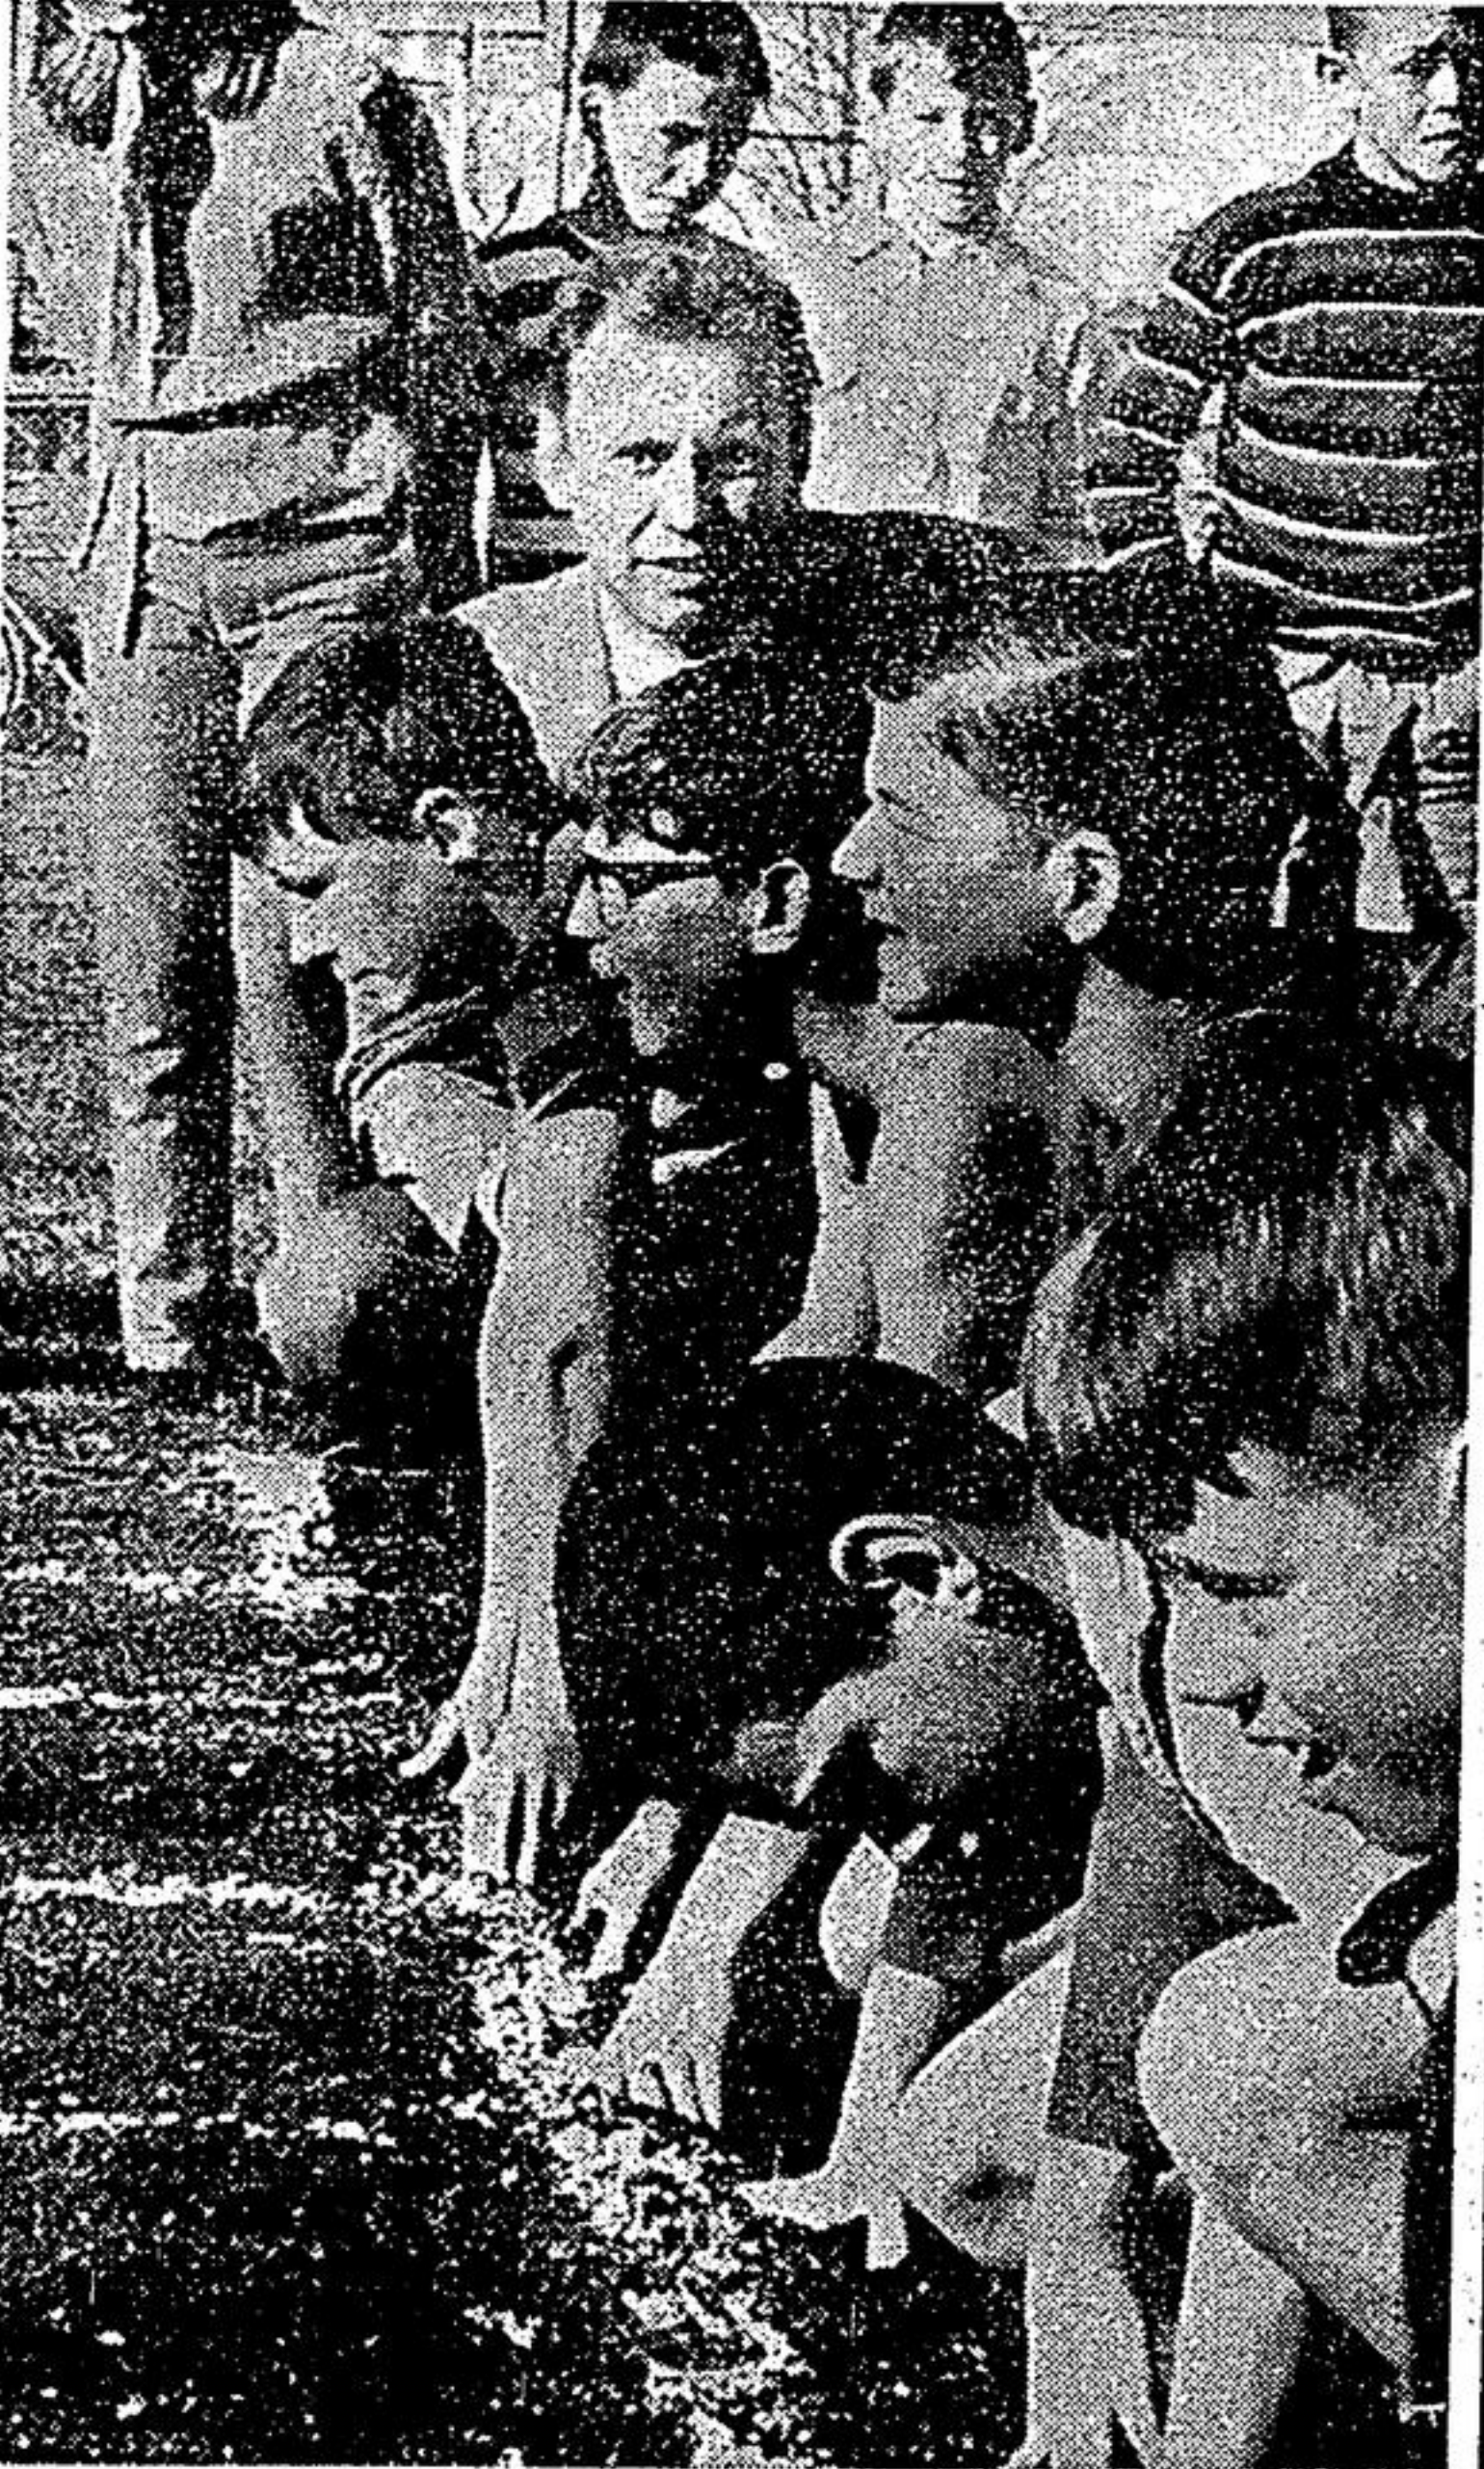

John Addison says: "This is only a beginning. Universal accessibility is a must."

FREE EDUCATION

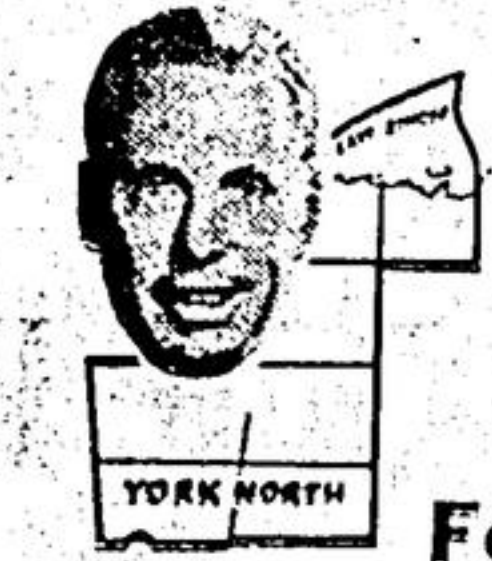

"My goal is free education for all Canadians with ability."
"We must immediately provide free tuition for post graduates continuing their education. Canada's need for professional people . . . doctors, engineers, architects . . . is urgent and immediate."

"It is also an urgent federal responsibility to help educate young farmers for tomorrow who can carry on the thousands of family-developed farms instead of moving into the cities." John Addison considers it essential to help young people gain the knowledge and skills needed for good jobs in our complex society. Further, Liberals like John Addison will greatly increase training programs for people who are threatened with unemployment or who are unemployed now.

universities and provinces to create the great expansion needed in educational facilities. At least $330 million are needed in the next fiscal year alone. A Liberal government will act, with the provinces, to provide $1.7 billion of aid to education, as called for in the Bladen Report, over the next ten years.

Business corporations will be encouraged to give more for education; university graduates will be encouraged to contribute 1% of their income . . . to help finance this great purpose. But, generally, all of these objectives can be met from revenues from our expanding economy, without an increase in federal taxation. No huge deficits or mass unemployment, as in the Diefenbaker years, will result from the Liberal program for education. A Liberal majority will ensure our economy is kept in high gear so we can afford these plans.

If you vote for John Addison on November 8th, you are supporting a realistic federal aid program for the education of your children . . . an investment in the future educational security of your family.

Dietary Supervisors Course To Be Offered In Grades 11 and 12

The Ontario Department of Education has announced that a Dietary Supervisors course has been added to the list of options available to students in Grades 11 and 12 in the Science, Technology and Trades Branch of the Four-Year Program.

The course consists of two parts — 10 dietary subjects and Home Economics. The dietary subjects, divided between Gds. 11 and 12, will cover such topics as Nutrition, Food Purchasing, Menu Planning, Diet Therapy, and Hygiene and Sanitation. The Home Economics course of study, designed for Grade 11, is divided into two sections — Family Development and Housing and Interior Design.

Some of the topics to be studied in Section One of the Home Economics course are: The History of Home Life in Ontario; Functions of the Family; The Family Life Cycle; and Principles of Management.

Section Two of Home Economics will deal with Modern Trends in Housing, Selection and Financing of Housing, Design, and Household Textiles. This program of studies is designed to train students for employment in a food service department of a hospital or other institution. Dietary Supervisors will be trained in routine supervisory work and in the recording of the food service department.
