

Canada's Centennial, A Day Like No Other In Stouffville

The best-styled beard among more than fifty competitors, July 1, was perfected by Jack McBride, Church Street, Stouffville. Mr. McBride is a teacher on the Stouffville High School staff. —Staff Photo.

The best pioneer-type beard was produced by Ken Roberts, Harold Street, Stouffville. The judges were — Mrs. Reta Laushway, Mrs. Marie Jack and James D. Williamson, all of Stouffville. —Staff Photo.

In dress that suited the centennial occasion, Reeve Ken Laushway and Mrs. Laushway leave home on their way to celebrations in the town park. —Staff Photo.

Saturday's parade featured many pretty girls including sixteen year old Susan Lee, Hawthorne Avenue. —Staff Photo.

This handsome family group drew applause from viewers all along the Stouffville parade route. Attired in turquoise blue and white are Mr. and Mrs. Bill Walden, Mill Street and children Gordon, 9, Bruce, 3 and Karen, 7. —Staff Photo.

The Duxbury sisters, Elaine, 6 and Lynn, 10, make a pretty pair. They are the daughters of Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Duxbury, Park Drive, North, Stouffville. —Staff Photo.

The Claremont family of Mrs. Glenn Evans, Kelly, 3 and Kim, 5, looked lovely in matching centennial gowns of red and white. —Staff Photo.

Stouffville's centennial queen, Nancy Wideman (right) played a prominent part in the all-day program. In the evening, she shared the spotlight with sister Sharon in several lovely duet numbers. —Staff Photo.

It was fitting that Rev. Douglas Davis, a prominent Stouffville pastor for so many years, should have a share in the centennial program. With him are (left to right) Lorne Bowdway, centennial chairman, Reeve Ken Laushway and Nancy Wideman, centennial queen. —Staff Photo.

It was a time for renewing acquaintances with old friends and meeting new ones. Stouffville councillor Tom Loneragan (right) chats with Charles McMurray of Orillia, father of John McMurray, Elm Road. —Staff Photo.