Agatha M. Bucking Bride of Vernon H. Scarrow

PICKERING — Agatha M. Bucking daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Bucking, R.R. 2, Clarendon, became the bride of Vernon H. Scarrow, son of Mr. and Mrs. S. Scarrow, Brandon, Manitoba. The wedding took place recently in the St. Francis de Sales R.C. Church. The bride was given in marriage by her father. The ceremony was performed by Father Walter Forgasch.

The bride looked lovely in a full length gown of white organza with the train falling from the empire waistline, elbow length bell sleeves and she carried white daisies and orchids.

Miss Corry Bucking was matron of honour, Miss Siena Bucking, of Toronto, and Miss Ruby Scarrow, of Brandon, Manitoba, were bridesmaids. The three bridal attendants were gowned in floor length blue shantung dresses with A-line skirts, empire waistlines and elbow length bell sleeves. Their bouquets were white daisies.

Ray Scarrow of Brandon, Manitoba, was best man. Don Hawking and Gerry Bucking were ushers.

Markham Boy Turns Radio Announcer

By MOLLY STEWART
MARKHAM — A Markham boy whose favorite past-time was working in a friend's basement studio making radio tapes, has realized a dream when he was employed as a radio announcer for station CFRS. The station belongs to the Simcoe Broadcasting Company.

Edward Williamson, 21, 16th Avenue, Markham had applied to several broadcasting companies with a view to work which would utilize his talents and training in the field.

When he received an answer from CFRS, he gave up his previous job as a member of the Sales Staff with the Canadian Institute for the Blind.

ONTARIO COLLEGE OF ART

Ed is a graduate of Markham District High School. He studied for one year at the Ontario College of Art and recently completed a course at the Michael Hopkins School of Radio and Television Announcing.

Amongst the subject he took, were use of console desks and closed circuit tables, turntables, tape television. He has also had instruction in reading commercial copy and news, as well as on-the-spot reporting.

PAST EXPERIENCE VALUABLE

Ed's past experience, which no doubt is valuable in his present type of work, included interior decorating, textbook design and production. During his school years he worked for the Canadian National Railways and travelled extensively through the Great Lakes area.

He was President of the local Anglican Young Peoples Association for one year and has also been a councillor at a boy's summer camp.

His hobby, which has now become his main stake, was making tapes from everything from a quiz show to an on-the-spot interview.

The experiments he has tried have been talking over a musical background and multi-track recordings to achieve a reverberation effect with records. He has also made eight millimeter movies involving small self-made plots.

DEAR DORIS

DEAR DORIS — My boy Joe, who is now 11, was in bed three years with polio as a toddler and sucked his thumb until he was six.

At school he was put in an advanced class and couldn't do the work. By the time they changed him he was discouraged and hated school.

After that he just dawdled and the teacher got disgusted. Yet she says he could do lots better. His only handicap — ten percent vision in one eye — shouldn't be a thing which would hold him back, the eye specialist says.

How do you make a child want to learn? Do we need to see a psychologist about him?

Baffled

DEAR BAFFLED — Joe started off with a far worse handicap; those years in bed, which deprived him of the usual chances to explore the toddler's world before being thrust into the much broader one at school.

In his case the advanced class was sheer folly — as you know by now.

When a child — or adult for that matter — has to try too hard, doesn't believe he can do it anyway, and then gets too tired, he is likely to give up.

A psychological assessment would put you back on the right track. The rest depends on careful and understanding teachers; patient help at home, with large doses of praise for any slightest step forward. All wrapped up in great gobs of love and laughter and fun.

DEAR DORIS — My husband left us several years ago and he has neither visited nor supported me and the four children since then. Usually sends a card at Christmas. Once in a while returns to the district and I am told enquires about his children.

(1) Should we send him a letter telling him of my daughter's coming marriage, or a wedding invitation?

(2) Should both his name and mine appear on the wedding invitation?

Wondering

DEAR WONDERING — (1) A letter or an announcement is probably best. Usually such a separation is evidence of bitterness; a bitterness which, if he were present, could cast a pall over an occasion which should be the last word in happiness.

(2) — Just your name — unless he were to contribute to the cost. I gather this would be the farthest thing from his mind, even if he were to be consulted about it.

DEAR DORIS — An office of the Canadian Red Cross has hired a contingent of retired men, former office workers, half-time. Every weekday morning they are each stationed at a telephone, recruiting blood donors.

Their efforts have contributed tremendously to this life-giving service.

One Of Them

DEAR ONE — That's the kind of news that is worth spreading. Such a job is made to order for folk with experience in an office.

Maybe your message will inspire some other group which needs help with a community effort. Or spur another retiree who can handle a telephone to find a place for his services.

To Black-Listed — Hasn't it occurred to you that you are just about as lonely with your non-legal husband as you are without him?

Living with a man without being married to him goes against the grain with Canadians. We see legal marriage as part of our way of life. So your friends shun you.

You yourself are the only one who can help yourself from the so-called Black List.
