The New Blends With The Old

By TERESA MOWAT
New and old mix well especially when it is in a school like ours. You know which is new and which is old but no distinction is made.

New teachers blend with the old. Their purpose is not new. It is to try to teach us that which will prepare us for what is to come in the future. The new school addition blends with the old. It serves the same function as do the older parts; it provides us with a place in which we can learn. New students also blend with the old. Size and behaviour of individuals used to distinguish them but fails to, now.

There is a day, however, which is drawing nearer hour by hour, and on that day, there shall be distinctions between the new and the old. We the senior students wish to give the NEW students a fitting memory of their entry into high school. Therefore, we may instruct you to "dress up" and be on your "best behaviour" to mark this solemn occasion.

and students alike. Prefects assist the teachers in that they try to keep peace and order in the halls before nine o'clock and after school, but a prefect is a prefect at all times. They assist the students by telling them politely what they are doing wrong so that they will not do it again. The student will thus know what what is expected of him in the future and thus misunderstandings will be avoided. Being a student prefect involves great responsibility. Prefects must set good examples for the other students as well as help them when they need help.

The aim of the prefect body is to enable the students to fit into the administration of the school so that it becomes a functional, meaningful and educational environment. At the same time, this system should enable the prefects to develop qualities of leadership, responsibility and the confidence in making decisions.

Have they your support?

HOUSTON'S CHANGES OWNERSHIP!

It is with a certain amount of regret and sadness that we make this announcement. Both Sybil and I have most certainly enjoyed doing business with the so many charming people that have frequented our store over the past 15 years. Many of these people we count as our friends.

The new owners, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Bowes are both qualified pharmacists, with a friendly and helpful personality we are certain will blend in ever so nicely in the friendly atmosphere of Stouffville. They now live in Stouffville and have two fine boys attending school. We welcome them and wish them every success in our former business.

Sincerely,
John & Sybil Houston.
