Some things in life Canadians can take for granted...

Like all the dairy products you want, when you want them—which is always. It's hard to think of dairy products not being in plentiful supply (how would you explain that to the family?). They are, because a lot of people see to it that you have all you need. That includes Canada's 200,000 milk and cream producers, the firms which process and merchandise dairy products, and the Canadian Dairy Commission. There are two main parts to the dairy industry. One is bottled milk and cream. The other is manufactured dairy products—butter, cheese, evaporated milk, powdered milk, ice cream and many others. Part of the job of the Dairy Commission is to help assure that dairy farmers, whose milk and cream goes into manufactured products, get an income which permits them to serve consumers with a steady, reliable supply. How do we do it? First, we support the market prices of dairy products. That's a protection for the producer and the consumer. It gives the producer a steady income from his milk and cream, which he needs like everybody else. And it assures the consumer of steady prices for dairy products. Market prices, though, aren't enough to give producers the income they need to stay in business. And without federal help supplies would drop and prices would increase. So we supplement their market income by help-out payments (not hand-outs) but only for the amount of milk and cream for the products which the market needs (we don't encourage the production of costly surpluses). Our aim is a stable, profitable dairy industry—and a continuing supply of high quality dairy products on the Canadian market. So by all means go on taking dairy products for granted. You can afford to—because we don't.
