Lady taxi driver from Stouffville

When a Stouffville woman applied to the Whitechurch Police for a license to drive a taxi in Whitechurch Township, it caused quite a stir at the council meeting.

The fuss was not because it was a woman who applied, nor was it a matter of competition. There is only one licensed cab in Whitechurch now, and it is in Oak Ridges.

Rather, the council could not agree on the cost of a license.

Police Chief Fred Mason explained that a license was $8 and there was an additional $2 for every driver other than the owner. Councillor Robert Lewis, in thinking over these figures, found them to be far too reasonable. "I think council should review this whole thing," he suggested.

Mr. Mason pointed out that by a Whitechurch by-law, taxis were required to display special metal plates identifying them, and they were to receive the plates when they were granted a license. This practice was discontinued, he said, when it was discovered that the cost of the licenses did not cover the cost of the plates when there were so few cabs.

It was generally agreed that a by-law review was in order. "If there are only two taxis in the township, we don't have to worry about needing special plates to identify them," stated Councillor Lewis. The by-law concerning the plates was duly noted down for review, but not before someone mentioned that it was not likely to be attended to for at least three weeks.

"Let's not hold up issuing the license for that long," Councillor Norman Barnard objected.

"But we don't want to issue the license just before we raise the fee," said Reeve Stewart Burnett.

After a discussion as to how high the fee should go, the council members decided that it should be left as is until the new year. They agreed to issue the license to the Stouffville woman subject to a medical report.

And now, Whitechurch will be doubling its number of taxis to a grand total of two.
