Soap isn't the only thing that's packaged, advertised and sold. The same thing happens to ideas. Canada's greatest idea—Expo 67—was wrapped up and sold to the world last year. And advertising was one of the things that made it happen. Once the world found out what a great idea Canada was offering, they came in the millions. They spent in the millions. And millions took home the idea that they would return to spend again. The success of Expo 67 cannot be measured in gate receipts alone. Expo told the world what a great place Canada is to visit...and increased tourist business is already being felt. Expo also told the world what a great place Canada is to invest in...to live in...and to trade with. Expo's contributions will extend well into Canada's second century. Expo 67 proved that a good idea, properly merchandised, is the best boost to Canada's economy. It's another example of how advertising helps good things happen...for our country and for you.
