Ontario Police commission favors unification of forces

MARKHAM TWP. — Members of the Ontario Police Commission warned representatives of the Southern Six when they met Nov. 6 at Buttonville that unless municipalities in the southern portion of York County unify their police forces immediately, crime could get out of bounds. The area's proximity to Metro demands surveillance of criminal elements, it was stressed. Present at the meeting with Police Commission officials were Council members from Markham and Vaughan Township, Markham Village, Stouffville and the Village of Woodbridge. Richmond Hill was invited but did not send representation. A Police Commission representative said he had spoken with Mayor Tom Broadhurst who indicated his town would "go along on an all or nothing basis" but would stay with their own force until that time.

Representatives from the Ontario Police Commission included the chairman, R. P. Milligan, O.C., Magistrate Thomas Graham, Major H. A. Sparling and advisors F. J. Taylor and F. E. Davies who, at the request of Markham Twp. compiled a "study on the feasibility of the amalgamation of the police forces of the Townships of Markham and Vaughan, Village of Markham, Village of Stouffville, Village of Woodbridge and the Town of Richmond Hill in the County of York.

F. J. Taylor presented the report, pointing out the advantages of unification — duplication would be eliminated by a centralized communications system and traffic control, heightened efficiency in personnel, where a larger force would permit in-service training, release men for active duty who are presently tied up with court work and reduce clerical

There would be less confusion over boundaries and less accommodation would be required.

Above all, Commission members advised the municipalities to unify their forces "in order that they will be prepared for future development and more able to cope with the increase in crime invading the area from Metropolitan Toronto."

"When countries are fighting a unified cause they must have a unified command to meet the need," urged Mr. Milligan. "So, in order to meet the rising crime rate, we must have a unified police force."

There was a reminder that with Markham Village to become a town in January, 1969, and with population expanding so rapidly in the ring of municipalities on Metro's northern border, that unless there is immediate unification, one or more municipalities may find it necessary to provide new police accommodation which would not be in the best interests of future development."

Mr. Taylor said if unification of forces is undertaken, members of the various forces involved should be well informed, and kept informed.

He said salary schedules and fringe benefits should receive careful attention — "esprit de corps is most important in a new organization," he said, adding, "We are speaking of people being unified and working together."

With central records system, Mr. Taylor said the area force would be informed of any criminal element living or moving into the area, without having to make several phone calls for information, and there would be an improved detective service.

Mr. Milligan pointed out that in an emergency time is of the essence, and only a year ago, during a scuffle with the Satan's Choice motorcycle gang, a very large force was required.

He said that where it took several hours to assemble the hundred to hundred and fifty officers that time, unification would permit much faster action.

The Commission believes that with unification, the present staff of 83 men would be sufficient under increased population.
