Pretty wedding for lovely bride

UNIONVILLE — Central United Church, Unionville, was the scene of a pretty wedding on March 21, 1970, when Carolyn Diane Gillanders became the bride of Robert Harvey Loveless.

Two baskets of tangerine and white gladioli, yellow shasta daisies, tangerine and white carnations and stephanotis decorated the interior of the church. Miss Marian Warne of Unionville presided at the organ.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, chose a floorlength empire style gown of white silk organza over taffeta with high neckline and long sleeves banded at the cuff. The waist, neckline, cuffs and hem were trimmed with two rows of double lace. A full train fell in cape effect from the shoulders and was also edged in lace. Her double illusion shoulder length veil flowed from a headpiece of silk flowers and lace dotted with crystals and pearls. She carried a cascade of tangerine sweetheart roses, tangerine and white baby carnations, yellow shasta daisies and stephanotis.

Mrs. David Phillips of West Hill was the matron of honor. The bridesmaids were Anne Tannahill, Ruth Gillanders, cousin of the bride, of Willowdale; Mrs. Peter Ganny, sister of the bridegroom, of Toronto and Valerie Gillanders sister of the bride as junior bridesmaid, R.R.1, Unionville. Their trains of dress material fell from the shoulders and was edged in lace to match the brides gown.

Glenn McKee of Aurora was the groomsman. The ushers were Morley Loveless, Agincourt, brother of the groom; David Phillips of West Hill and Ronald Mann of Keswick. They all wore tuxedos.
