From the minister's study

By V.G. Shillington
In June, our Church carried out a visitation program. We called it 'Operation Opinion'. The aim was to make contact with people who had little or no connection with church, and to gain their opinion on religion in general, and Christian faith in particular. The response was interesting and helpful.

On the question of denomination, most people maintained that there were NOT too many denominations in Canada. Everyone should have the freedom to express his religion according to his convictions. Several said the church is on the way out. This knowledge was clearly second-hand since they hadn't been in church for years. Most of the people we talked to acknowledged that Christ was divine in some way, but they were not quite sure why. Everyone owned a Bible, but few read it.

The response that fascinated me was the one concerning suffering in the world. It's an old one that scarcely ever receives an adequate answer. C.S. Lewis, an outstanding British educator, wrote a book before he died on The Problem of Pain. He delves into the subject with brilliant aptitude. If this question troubles the reader, and he is earnest about it, then he should hunt up that book by Lewis.

Meanwhile, let us consider a couple of ideas. Does man allow pain? Does he also cause it? Is he in a position to question a higher power on the pain problem?

Let's say then that we are in that position to raise our tiny voices to heaven and inquire there, 'Why all the suffering?' Being in that position means that we ourselves do not allow or inflict this evil known as pain. We must be good people, and we must seek the good of others, so we question God.

But is it true that we do not cause pain? Emotional and physical? What about the bloody wars, civil and uncivil? Who is to blame? What about the accidents that cause suffering and death? Can God be held accountable for faulty construction? Drunk driving? Drug traffic? Student riots? V.D.? Before we question God on the subject of suffering, let's make sure man himself is completely free from guilt.

"But why do the righteous suffer?" you say. May I suggest that you ask them. They have first hand experience on the matter, which I do not. Ask the man who will be writing this article for the next few weeks. Mr. Tarr is one of the most gracious men I have met. Ask him, as he sits in his wheelchair, why the righteous suffer.

School caretaker honored

By Vera Moyer
DICKSON'S HILL — On Friday afternoon, Mr and Mrs Maurice Eby were honored by Principal Martindale, the staff and students of the school. Following the presentation of two lovely chaise lounges, the children rendered three rousing cheers. Mr. Eby is retiring after 11 years service as school custodian. His pleasant manner toward all pupils and ready co-operation with the staff endeared him to everyone. His genuine concern for cleanliness and yard appearance was also appreciated. He will be greatly missed when the new term begins next fall. Following the completion of her first University year, Jan Davidson plans to spend the summer on the farm of her parents, Mr and Mrs Bruce Davidson.

Mr and Mrs Maurice Eby, R.R.2, Markham were honored, Friday, by the staff and students of Dickson's Hill Public School where Mr Eby has been the caretaker for the past 11 years. They were presented with two reclining lawn chairs in appreciation of their service. — Jas. Thomas.

A large number of friends gathered at the parsonage Friday evening in honor of Mr and Mrs Robert Walker and their family. They are leaving the community to take up residence on their farm at Stayner. They will be greatly missed in the area, as well as the church. The W.M.S. extends a cordial invitation to ladies of the neighborhood to attend the annual outdoor fellowship, July 7, 12 noon at the residence of Mr and Mrs Wm. Grove. Present in the Sunday morning service was Mrs. Charles Doner and family of Pembroke. They are spending several weeks at her parents, Mr and Mrs Cliff Burkholder, while Margaret takes a course in Toronto to qualify as a kindergarten teacher.

Julia and Susan Rutledge are summer guests with Rev. and Mrs. Faw. The Decoration Service was largely attended. Rev. John Hamilton was unable to address the worship, but Rev. Denis Gibson filled in most capably.

Even if something wears out you save money.

As we all know, Volkswagens don't change much from year to year. So the parts that make up a Volkswagen, therefore, don't change much either. (And if we don't spend a lot on new parts—neither do you.) Also, the way we fix VW's ends up saving you money as well. Because behind every Volkswagen dealership is a staff of factory-trained VW mechanics. Each one a graduate of the Volkswagen School of Horrors.

There, we make them take VW's apart and put them together until they can almost do it with their eyes shut. And again, since Volkswagens don't change much, our mechanics get plenty of practice (and plenty good at servicing them. Which keeps labour charges down. And if you don't need a brand new part, they'll fix you up with a brand new old part. (Our exchange parts work just as well as new ones—they just don't cost as much.) And lately, we've come up with what might be the ultimate money-saving device. Our new VW Diagnosis System. With all its electronic eyes and ears, it can see and hear things that a mechanic can't. And actually spot trouble before it happens. And you don't have to pay for something that doesn't happen.
