

Ballantrae School fire

A private pool only 2,000 feet from building

BALLANTRAE — If fire chiefs had known the location of a private swimming pool within 2,000 feet of Ballantrae School, more of the building could have been saved, trustee Norman Weller told a York County Board of Education meeting, Monday night.

The Aurora member said such information should be obtained throughout the Region and passed on to local fire departments. "It might have saved this Board a lot of money if water supplies in the vicinity of the Ballantrae School had been revealed in advance," he continued.

The loss, in a blaze May 5, has been estimated at $500,000.

Board chairman Marvin Hunter agreed with trustee Weller, claiming knowledge of pool sites could be valuable in the future. Mariane Gillan Georgina, suggested the information could be secured through the Emergency Measures Organization.

Markham trustee Donald Cousins expressed concern over the rash of break-ins at schools throughout the County, particularly in his own area. In reference to this, trustee Ross Joffe recommended installation of electronic surveillance equipment. He felt it would serve a useful purpose in isolated regions. But director Sam Chapman claimed the cost would be prohibitive.

With respect to accommodation at the Ballantrae School site, trustee John McMurray wondered whether the old building could be replaced before 1974. He urged a start on reconstruction as quickly as possible.

Mr. Chapman said there was no assurance when the entire school might be ready. He felt, however, that the new section would open in September.

There was sufficient insurance coverage to replace the structure 100 per cent.

School bands thrill crowd

By Sheila McLeod

STOUFFVILLE — You blow a mean horn Mr. Hawley, and that band of maroon-jackets you hang around with at the high school sure know how to stir things up. Friday evening, the maroon-jackets of Stouffville District Secondary School Senior Band, the white-shirted Juniors, and the less formal Stage Band, blew up one of the most entertaining storms to hit the Stouffville stage all season.

Although in no way qualified to adjudicate technical finesse, the numbers, even the ones with intricate arrangements, seemed to be performed with surprisingly little discordance.

The program offered an interesting selection of classical and modern music — Offenbach to the Beatles — and a sentimental sojourn into the jazz era of big band Eldridge, Jim Rehill, Jerry Waite sat in on this nostalgic session, along with other members of the stage band, Richard Browning, James Alty, Craig Waite, John Gresham, Don Reesor, Dave Herbert, Trudy Norton, Jim Brodie, Pierre Waite, Paul Gamble and leader-trumpeter, Ted Hawley.

The Junior Band, a well-coordinated group of budding musicians, started its presentation with a march that could become Stouffville's theme song "Airport". It ended with a rip-snorting rendition of "Blues a go-go," described by Mr. Hawley as a S.D.S.S. national anthem.

Members of the Senior Band, who opened the evening's entertainment, whetted the audience's appetite. They also closed the program and brought everyone to their feet, clamoring for more.

Two novelty numbers, held to the last like a meringue dessert, topped their performance. "Nightbeat," the meanderings of a New York City policeman, and "Instant Concert," a hodge-podge of musical extracts.

The young musicians presented a gift of appreciation to Mr. Hawley after the concert, along with a baseball bat to keep everyone in order.

Obviously, it will never be needed.

Flutes to tubas are well under control and S.D.S.S. bands will continue to respond with enthusiasm to the more subtle encouragement of their director's baton.
