

Flowers to enjoy in the wild

Not all of Ontario's beautiful flowers are produced in gardens. Woodlands and public parks will soon be touched with bright colors as the wild flowers begin to bloom. There is a wide range of wild flowers along roadsides and nature trails in Ontario, including bloodroot, columbine, wild ginger, lady's slipper, hepatica, bunchberry, and our provincial flower, the trillium.

Unfortunately, many of these flowers are destroyed each year by picking and land development. Some of the plants in the path of development can be saved by planting them in a wild-flower garden, says R.F. Gomme, horticultural specialist, Ontario Ministry of Agriculture and Food. Conditions must be as close as possible to the natural habitat of the plant. Wild flowers require semi-shaded, moist, well-drained soils. Most wild flowers can be transplanted either in the spring or fall. Trilliums can be moved almost anytime. Several nurseries sell potted wild flowers especially for the garden. More information on wild flowers can be obtained from these nurseries or from the many books available on the subject at local libraries.

If you are out for a walk on a bright spring day, remember not to pick the wild flowers. Leave them for others to enjoy.

It all started with two ducks on the property of Dr. and Mrs. L. Mendels, Bethesda Road, R.R. 4, Stouffville. Since then, the flock has grown, reaching almost 200 at one point.

Dr. Mendels feeds his 'feathered friends' all winter long, thus enticing them to stay.

Test gravel pit law in Uxbridge

UXBRIDGE TWP. - UXBRIDGE Township's bylaws, zoning and regulatory, relating to pit operations in the municipality, were put to the test a few weeks ago in Supreme Court action against Timber Bros.

"Am I to understand that anyone who has operated a pit prior to the passing of our bylaw can mine to perimeter fences and nothing binds him to rehabilitate the area?" questioned Reeve Bob Nesbitt.

That, Mr. McLennan agreed, was the legal gist of the matter until provincial controls come into force. Pits established after 1968, he assured Council, were securely bound by provisions in the Township bylaw which had been basically upheld by the Supreme Court.

"You are never going to stop pit operations with zoning," he informed Council, "because decisions in the last two years have all said that gravel pits can be non-conforming."

He recommended that the court decision be appealed, however, on the grounds that there is no basis in law for applying non-conforming use to a regulatory bylaw.

"You have to decide if you want to adopt the regulations of the Pits and Quarries Act or if you want to enhance the province's standards and see if we can make them stick. Unless it's sorted out, anyone establishing his pit as continuing conforming use is going to ignore the local bylaw."

Although the solicitor assured him that the provincial Act would take precedence over all legislation relating to the gravel industry, in August, and would require rehabilitation of pits, Reeve Nesbitt was extremely skeptical that anything would change regarding these non-conforming operations.

He voted, however, with other council members to launch an appeal against the Supreme Court decision.
