

TV aerials too high?

BALLANTRAE — Although some residents are unhappy with the unsightly appearance of a rental office and a truck at the entrance to the Felray Subdivision here, the Whitechurch-Stouffville Ratepayers Association has voted not to press the issue.

The reply to an association letter asking that it be cleaned up was read at their meeting, Thursday.

Felray solicitor Harry Raymond informed the association that they were still waiting word on the development freeze connected with the proposed international airport at Pickering, and would need the office when they continue with Phase 2.

Association members were angered that Mr. Raymond included in his letter a request to have television aerials lowered to within 15 feet of rooftops to comply with the subdivision agreement.

Some members charged it was a veiled threat designed to discourage them from protesting.

In the end they decided they would wait to see if the development freeze is lifted soon.

Clay Clouter of Felray Investments said Monday that although there is always a chance the freeze would be lifted, he imagined it would take longer than a year.

He described the association's request to have the rental office moved as "ridiculous" as Felray would need it for Phase 2 "whether it's this year or next."

He expressed surprise at Mr. Raymond's reference to the height of television aerials and wondered if it was the same kind of "nit-picking" of which the ratepayers were guilty.

An excellent auction sale will be held on the property of W.R. 'Dick' Coffey, lot 11, conc. 1, Uxbridge Twp., this Saturday, beginning at 1 p.m. The farm has been sold.

Old-fashioned pump intrigues children

The old wooden pump was never too popular 'down on the farm', but at Pioneer Village, Saturday, the children were intrigued by it. The occasion was the annual Mennonite Festival, attended by hundreds. Here, Dorothy Bientema, 11, of R.R. 1, Gormley,
