

Family Life Centre seeks cheerier image

STOUFFVILLE — A more cheerful and positive image should be fostered by the Family Life Centre say members of the publicity committee for this sponsored counselling and education service.

Crisis management counselling are seen too often as the only functions of this organization, according to Anita Snow, of Stouffville.

The head of the publicity and public relations committee believes the Centre was originally established to anticipate and prevent crisis situations in the family through education and community discussion of family problems.

"Our theme or slogan should be: Enjoy life — it's earlier than you think," she said. "It's a more positive stance."

Her committee discussed the issue of public image at its first meeting last Thursday. Others on the committee include Mrs. Terry Foulds, Jan McBride, Helen DeWitt, and George Young of Stouffville; plus Duard Rose and Barbara Dick of Markham.

Mrs. Snow, also a member of the centre's Board of Directors, said the Centre is investigating the feasibility of expanding services to a site in Stouffville. The counselling headquarters for the area are now located in Markham.

(Created in 1968, there are now Family Life Centres in five communities. They provided counselling to nearly 2000 people in 1972, up about 500 per cent from 1970.

Supported by churches, schools, service clubs and similar groups, they provide counselling for marriage, family and personal problems and generate ideas and programs to help people handle the stresses of modern living.

Two up-coming conferences are in the "ounce of prevention" category.

Request clean-up again

BALLANTRAE — If at first you don't succeed

So the Whitnurch-Stouffville Ratepayers Association will try again to have a truck and what it considers a mess at the entrance to the Felray subdivision cleaned up.

Felray Investments refused once because its appeal for an amendment to the land freeze order imposed by the provincial government after an announcement of an international airport in Pickering was still pending.
