

Graceful old houses give village air of distinction

STOUFFVILLE — The streets of Stouffville provide a treasure for the ever growing numbers of people interested in artifacts of the past.

Stouffville will celebrate its Centennial in 1977 and the quiet, tree lined streets reflect the town's heritage.

By taking a short walk the observer will see a wealth of architectural styles and individual flourishes no longer built into new homes.

— Everywhere in evidence are stained glass windows, ornamental brickwork, "gingerbread" trim and sprawling pillared porches.

On this page are presented a few examples of the houses which give Stouffville its unique atmosphere. These are only a very few examples and many other which are just as distinctive have been overlooked.

Photos

by

John Montgomery

