Where to find a 10¢ pay phone.

The cost of making a local call from some pay phones in your local calling area has increased to 20 cents. But there are still a lot of 10 cent pay phones around. And, we'd like to tell you where you can find them.

The 10¢ Pay Phone
Generally, you'll find these phones on city sidewalks, in railway and bus stations. Pay phones in hospitals, nursing homes, rooming houses and churches will also remain at 10 cents.

The 20¢ Pay Phone
Pay phones in most other locations, such as hotels and restaurants, go up to 20 cents.

Emergency Calling
Replacement of the familiar three-slot pay phone with the new single-slot Centurion also means you can dial, in an Emergency, to "0" Operator and to Directory Assistance and Repair service, without coins.

From now on when you're calling from a pay phone, look for the information card above the handset, it clearly tells you whether it's a 10-cent or 20-cent phone.
