Dr. Ellen Brown is sharing a quiet moment with "Mike" her Great Pyrenees. He was judged best of breed in the show.

All those dogs with their tongues hanging out seem to have inspired nine month old Jennifer Rider, who is helping to hold "King" the family bull terrier. King was judged best Canadian Bred Dog by the Bull Terrier Club of Canada.

Keeping an eye on baby?

Patrick Twist can sleep secure in the knowledge that "Peggoty" the old english sheepdog, will watch over him, although many may wonder how Peggoty manages to keep an eye on the youngster while blinded by so much hair. However, sheep dog fanciers explain that the dog peers between the layers.

Valerie Parry and "Chad" enjoy a few playful moments outside the arena before parading in the show ring at Markham arena. Ms. Parry, who is from Unionville, had several dogs entered.

Markham Kennel Club dog show attracts all ages despite weather

It was extremely hot and humid in the arena on Saturday and dog owners devised various ways to keep their pets cool. These lucky Saint Bernards even got their own private fans. Note that the resourceful owner even brought along a battery to run them.

Proudly displaying the ribbon won by his Keeshound "Sprout" is Jack Nugent of Locust Hill. His animal won a coveted "Best of Breed-Ribbon."

Uxbridge-Scott Historical Society holds annual steam and threshing show

The combination of hot weather and readily available water proved too much for these girls, who soon proceeded to splash each other

Horseback riding was one of the attractions at the steam show. Here Adam and Sean Ruppel try not to fall off as their steed slowly proceeds around the museum grounds.

Wayne Cruse of Brockville has one of the most popular exhibits at the steam show. He manned an old-fashioned shingle maker and is here busily trimming the cedar shakes to a uniform size.
