The Stoffville Kinsmen, here led by Ray Donn, heave hard in an attempt to throw their opposition off balance during the traditional tug-of-war in the park.

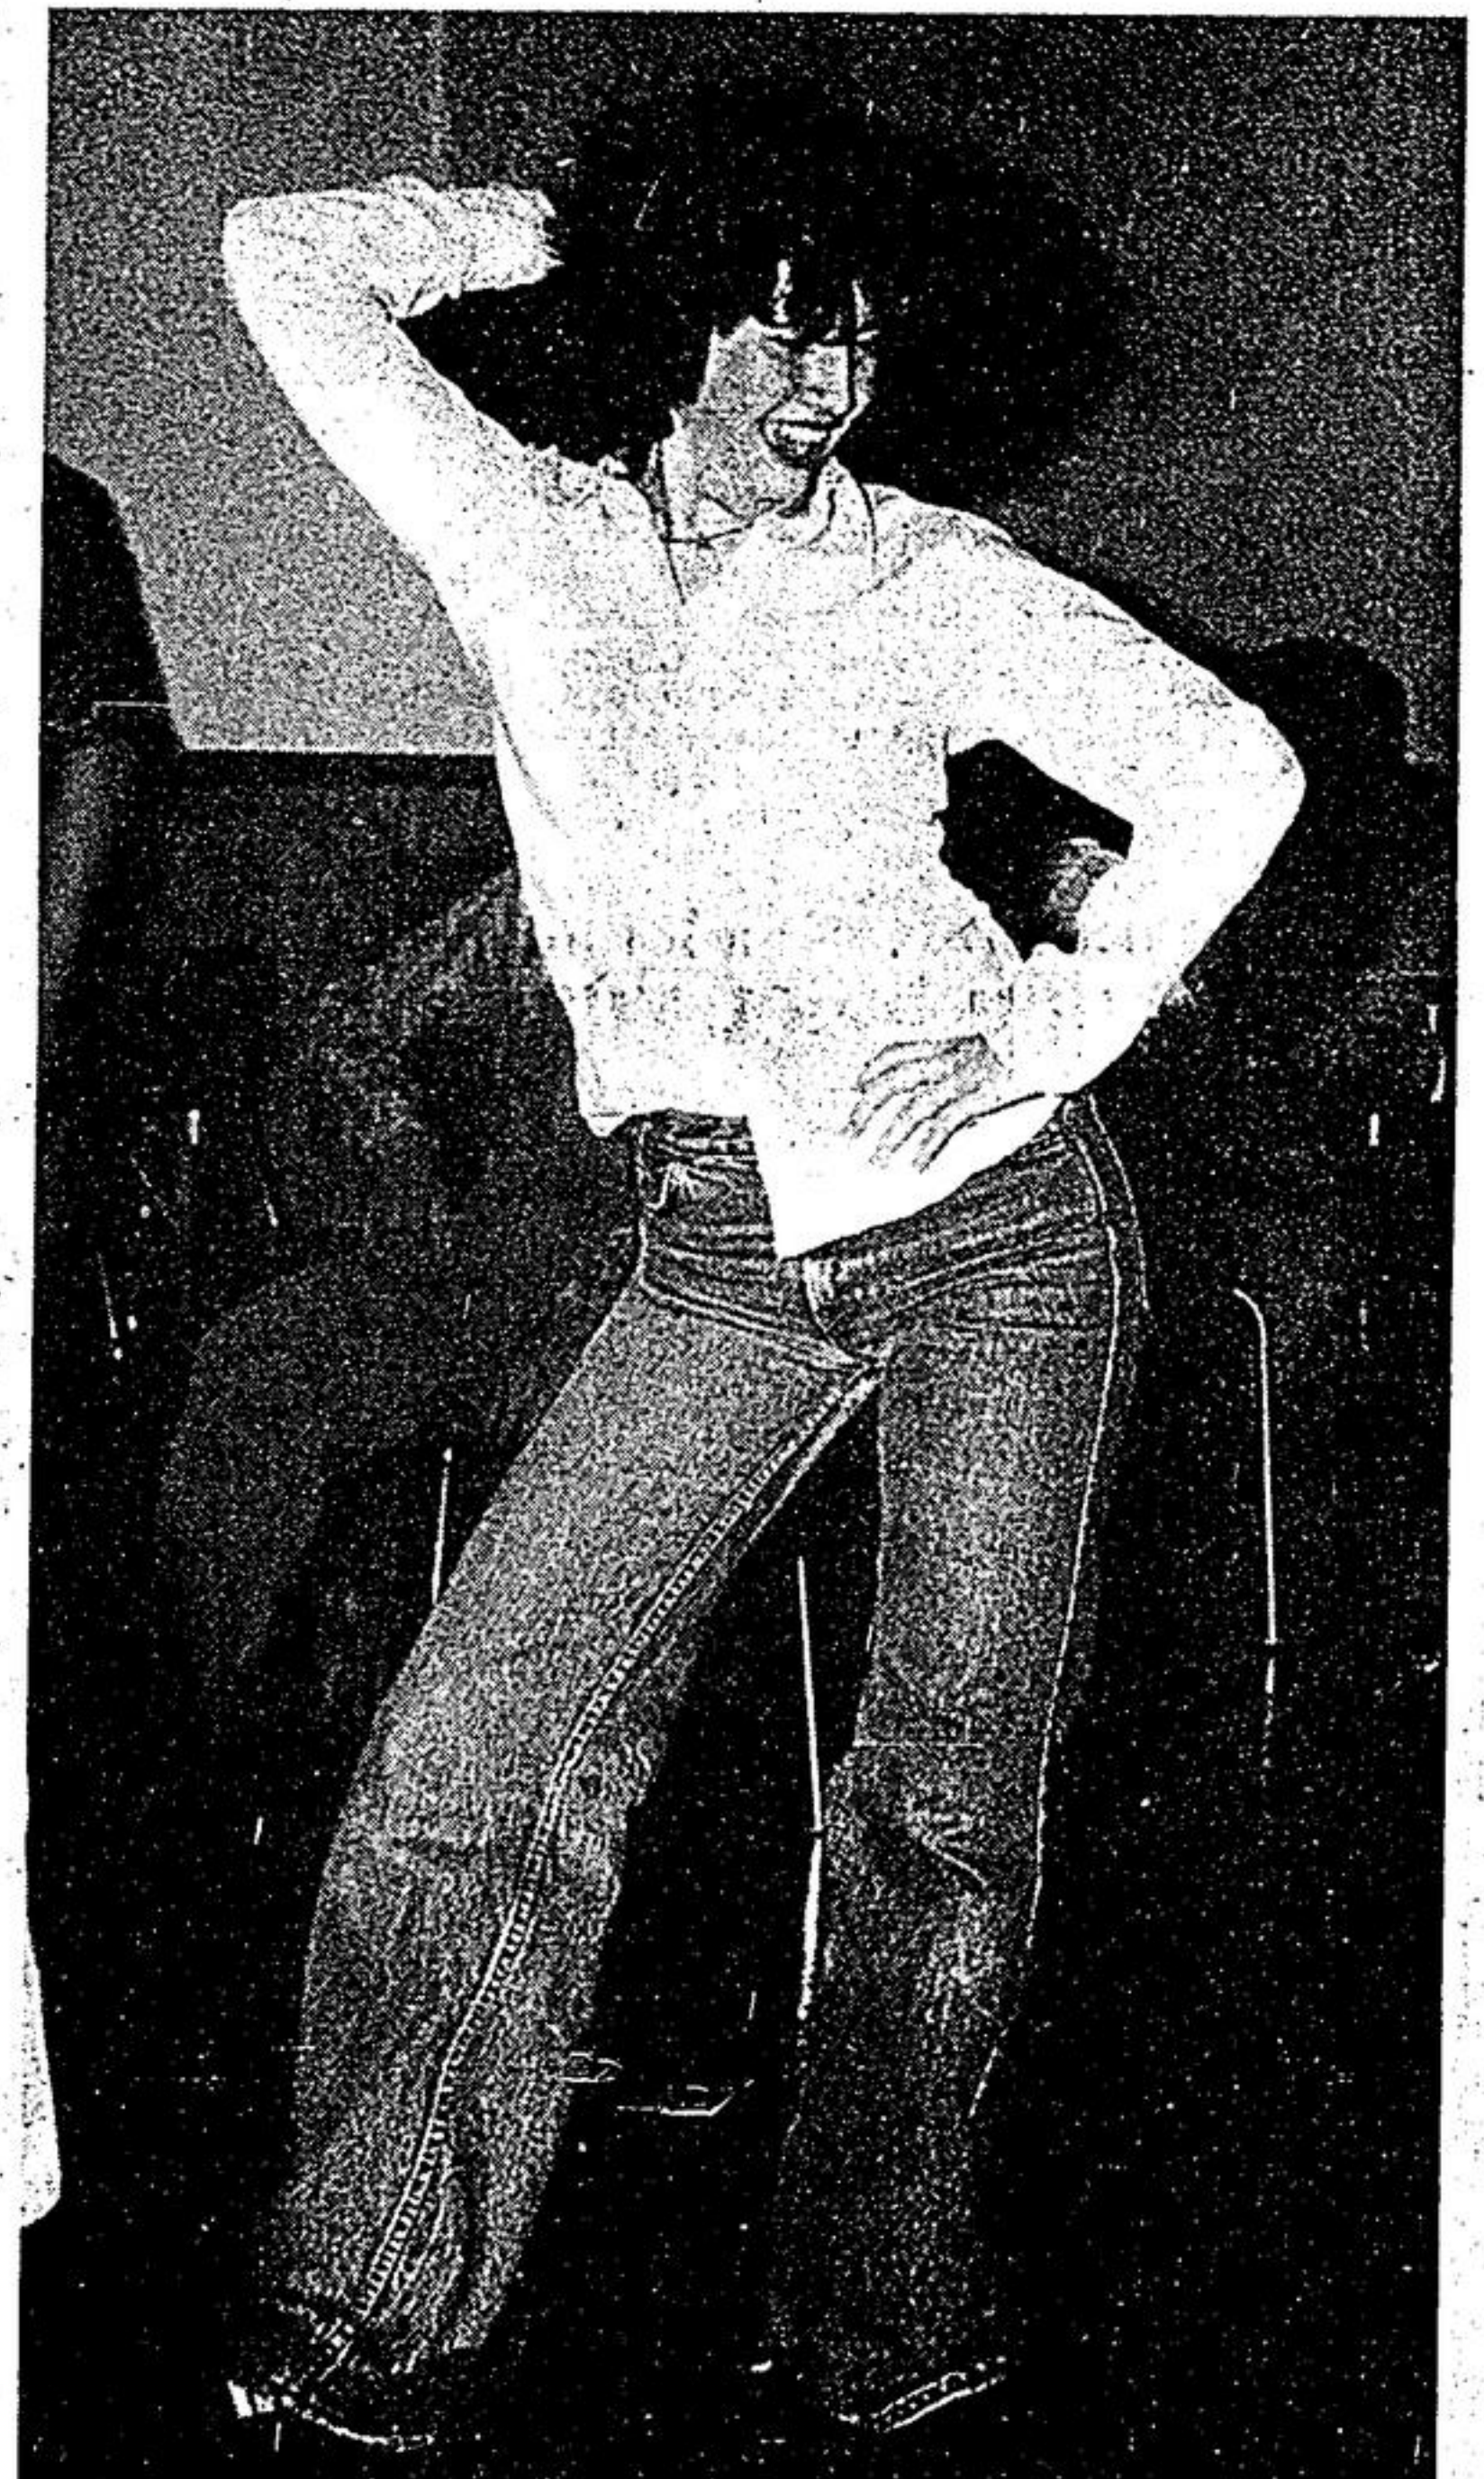

Paul Stouffer seems to be straining every muscle to pull his team of Lions to victory, but they eventually lost out to the Chamber of Commerce squad after a hard-fought tussle.

The Chamber team won the match but not until the battle had gone back and forth for over a minute.

Lion's Mardi Gras chases February blues

One of the favorite attractions for young and old alike were the cutter rides. Here Les Beare of Cedar Valley, crowds four eager youngsters into his cutter for a romantic circuit of the park. The kids were especially enthralled with the bell on his sled.

There was some frenzied activity on the dance floor at Latcham Hall during the teen dance on Saturday night. The enthusiastic young lady dancing up a storm is Robin Donn, a SDSS student.

Herb Yakely and his lady friend with the five o'clock shadow enjoyed themselves at the skating party which was part of the Mardi-Gras fun on Saturday night. The counterfeit lady won the prize for best woman's costume but coyly refused to give 'her' name. The dutch pair behind them George Lintner and Bonnie MacAloney, captured first place for best couple's costume.

Hordes of hungry kids and their parents gobbled up hot dogs as fast as the firemen could serve them up at the Mardi Gras. Here Bob MacAloney, Marvin Betz and Fred Castle attempted to keep up with the demand.
