Late Harvey Moyer

Progressive farmer

Harvey W. Moyer, Past Master of Richardson's Masonic Lodge (1947-48) died last Thursday, April 6, in his 92nd year.

Mr. Moyer, the eldest son of David Moyer and Fanny Wideman, was born on the family farm at Dickson's Hill where his nephew Warren lives today.

Until 1944 Mr. and Mrs. Moyer owned and operated the former Pipher farm with its stone house built in 1861. The farm is immediately south of the Moyer homestead.

He farmed through the depression and war years and had one of the first accredited Holstein dairy herds in the district.

Before local hydro was available he operated a miller with electricity from a Delco generator. When he started farming threshing was done by steam-engine, which required about 10 men to operate. Before retiring he had his own threshing equipment which could be operated by one man.

After leaving the farm Mr. Moyer built a home on Lloyd Ave., Stouffville. This was the first house in a field south of the location of the former livery stable.

Until 1953 he sold real estate for J.A. Williams farm agency and made many friends through his business contacts.

In 1949 his wife Helen (Nellie Campbell) died and a few years later he and the former Emily Hurst of Buffalo were married. The couple moved to North Miami Beach, Florida, bought a lot there and Mr. Moyer built a house.

Our churches

Commandments guideline freedom

By Rev. Ted Green
St. James Presbyterian Church

Freedom is perhaps our most cherished belief, the foundation of our country, our way of life. We do not live under tyranny, or dictatorship. We are free to worship, to voice our opinions, to live and raise a family.

Yet, the freedom we cherish so highly is in grave danger in our world. We want to be free "to do our own thing" without counting the cost of that freedom on the lives of others. Freedom to choose one's lifestyle can be creative. On the other hand, it can result in pure selfish indulgence without regards to one's neighbours. Anyone who has had their sleep disturbed constantly by neighbours knows that it is they who have had their freedom limited. We want to be free to indulge in whatever style of sexual freedom we desire, but at what expense? We see all around us the breaking up of families, and the confusion and anger of children growing up in broken homes. They have lost their freedom to grow up in a healthy environment.

We want to be left free to eat or drink whatever we wish, but who suffers when that results in addiction? Again it is our families and friends who suffer as well as we do. For years, the proposed legislation for gun control has been consistently opposed on the basis of freedom. Yet the ease with which one can procure a handgun makes life fearful and that is a loss of freedom for society as a whole. We become afraid to go out at night, afraid to go in some parts of our cities at any time. Is that freedom? Probably few would want to go back to a society where every aspect of life was legislated and supervised. But if our society is to continue, we must seek ways to protect the freedoms essential for life.

There was a group of people very unfree. Mired in slavery in a foreign land they had despaired of ever being free again. Yet God chose these people, raised up a leader, Moses, and delivered the Hebrew people from Egypt. So God identified himself on the side of freedom, not bondage. But unlimited freedom? Along the way from slavery to the promised land, God gave these people a set of rules we now call the 10 Commandments. Today we view those rules as "stuffy, out of date, repressive". But they were not given by a hard-nosed God wishing to snuff out the enjoyment of life. Quite the contrary, these rules were guarantees of freedom. "Do not kill", "do not steal" make community life possible. "Do not commit adultery, honour your father and mother" are given that we might enjoy happy family life. "Do not covet or desire" means that we do not enslave ourselves to the quest for affluence, the rat race or sacrificing our lives for success or power.

The fundamental point of the commandments is that in order for human beings to live together in community, they must limit certain areas of life to protect the whole. There would be no freedom for the Hebrew people if someone was able to go out and kill someone he didn't like. Is life any different today? I would contend that in the fundamentals of life it is not: we still need foundations,

God-given guidelines for living together in freedom and happiness. We need guidelines to prevent our enslaving ourselves to pills or drugs or booze or our jobs. And as I look at our society with so much breaking down, marriages, families, individuals, so many people searching for meaning, so many afraid of tomorrow, I find the 10 Commandments just as relevant as ever.

Men's breakfast

Dr. Matthew Dymond, former Minister of Health in the Ontario government will be the speaker at a men's breakfast to be held at St. James Presbyterian Church this Saturday April 15.

Dr. Dymond presently lives in Port Perry where he served many years as a medical doctor. Now retired, Dr. Dymond is still active. At present he is National Coordinator for the "Second Century Advance for Christ Campaign", a project of the Presbyterian Church across Canada.

The breakfast will be held in the basement of St. James Church beginning at 8:30 a.m. and any man from Stouffville or area is invited to attend. There is no charge but a collection will be taken, proceeds to go to the Stouffville Family Life Centre.
