Honey Agar is home with her family again because arthritis research is paying off.

Until recently, Honey Agar was unable to lead the active life enjoyed by most women of her age.

Honey has systemic lupus erythematosus, a rheumatic disorder that has kept her in hospital for up to six months a year throughout her married life. She describes those years as "a living hell" for her and for her family.

"It seemed that all I could look forward to was pain, weakness and death."

Honey's outlook on life has been changed — not through any over-night "miracle" but through long and diligent rheumatic disease research.

Honey has spent all but six days of the past year at home with her husband, Roy, and their 15-year-old daughter, Michelle.

Honey's condition can't be cured — yet. But, its devastating effects are being controlled. She now manages her own household with a little help from her family. She can also devote time to her new role as first president of the Ontario Lupus Association which, as a specialized affiliate of The Arthritis Society, provides lay counselling and moral support for lupus patients and their families.

For Honey Agar, and thousands of other Canadians, arthritis research is paying off.

About one in every eight Canadians has some form of arthritis. But victory is coming within reach. Your support for The Arthritis Society will be used to fund vital medical research.

For more information about arthritis write or call your local Arthritis Society.
