Stouffville man with assault causing bodily harm, were acquitted, last week, in a Toronto Court.
Constables Ronald Laing, Jack More and Gordon Sherman were allowed to go after Judge Claude Morrison ruled there was insufficient evidence on which to make a conviction.
Charges against the three officers followed the arrest of Robert Olszewski of RR 4, Stouffville for driving while impaired. The local man claimed he was beaten by the constables when he refused to accompany them to the police station.
P.C. Laing said he questioned the motorist after finding his car parked in the middle of the road. The driver appeared very intoxicated, he recalled.
Laing said he had to summon assistance in an effort to get Olszewski out of his vehicle. Injuries, he stated, resulted when the man fell to the road during a struggle that ensued.
The driver claimed police had refused to tell him why he was being arrested.
Olszewski was handed a four-month jail term following his conviction earlier in Newmarket Court.

Fatalities show increase
Ontario's nine-month statistics for 1978 show "a shocking increase" in pedestrian fatalities, said Minister of Transportation and Communications James Snow.
Pedestrian deaths rose from 172 in the first nine months of 1977 to 193 in 1978, an increase of 12.2 per cent.
"I'm very concerned about this shocking increase in pedestrian deaths," said Snow.
Statistics last year point out that most pedestrians were killed while trying to cross through traffic, running onto the roadway, or walking on the wrong side of the road. Pedestrians using a roadway should always walk facing traffic and wear light coloured pieces of clothing to make themselves more visible to motorists.
"I urge parents to make sure their children know where and when to cross every road, and I remind pedestrians of all ages that a moving vehicle can't stop on a dime. As for drivers, be on the alert for pedestrians crossing the streets and most of all, be courteous." Snow concluded.

Have a merry Christmas The Tribune
