STOUFFVILLE — Students of Orchard Park School are participating in an Elective Program whereby they concentrate on various activities over a period of several weeks.

Six girls selected a course called "Communications-Young and Old." Every Wednesday, they visit Parkview Home in Stouffville and talk to residents there.

The group includes Terri Piette, 12; Cindy McNeil and Jennifer Sayers, 11; Karen Nugent, 10; Lindsey Baston and Linda Hachey, both nine.

wheelchairs, "they're not really sick at all."

Lindsey said that going as a group to Parkview has made her want to go back on her own. "Maybe on Saturdays I can drop in," she said. She expressed surprise at how independent the people are. She recalled offering to help one person in a wheelchair, but the lady declined. "She wanted to do it herself." She described Parkview as "like one big house". The Grade 5 student said she was amazed at the facilities there. "They have everything," she said. "And people are really, really nice," she added.

Cindy admitted that when she arrived there the first time, she was kind of scared. "But now I'm not," she added quickly. One lady, she said, told about her hobbies and how she had made 41 rugs. "I want to go back and see her again." She pointed out that while some of the residents are confined to Visiting Parkview was not a new experience for Terri. Her father, she said, often calls there on Sundays and takes several to the Missionary Church. "Sometimes I go along and help," Terri said she met one lady from Clear Creek near Port Dover. On talking to her, she discovered she knew about her grandfather's garage in Delhi.

"I'm really happy I chose this course," agreed Linda, "I enjoy it so much, the time goes really fast." The ones with problems, she said, aren't ashamed to talk about them.

Karen said she liked hearing about their families and sharing in games. "I didn't think any could bowl, but some are really good." One lady, she said, rolled the balls while seated in a wheelchair.

"It makes us all feel good, knowing that maybe we did some good," concluded Terri.

Bible School

MARKHAM — Four Mennonite churches in the Markham area are currently participating in a Family Winter Bible School.

The gatherings, that include children, young people and adults, meet Wednesday evenings at Dickson's Hill School.

The concluding "celebration" will take place at Wideman Church, March 7.

Topics of discussion are: Family Enrichment (George and Judith Best); Contemporary Christian Thought (Lawrence Burkholder); This We Believe (Rev. Paul Martin); Sermon on the Mount (Maurice Martin); More-With-Less Lifestyle (Stella Reesor and Elsie McDowell); Creative Worship (Lois Burkholder).

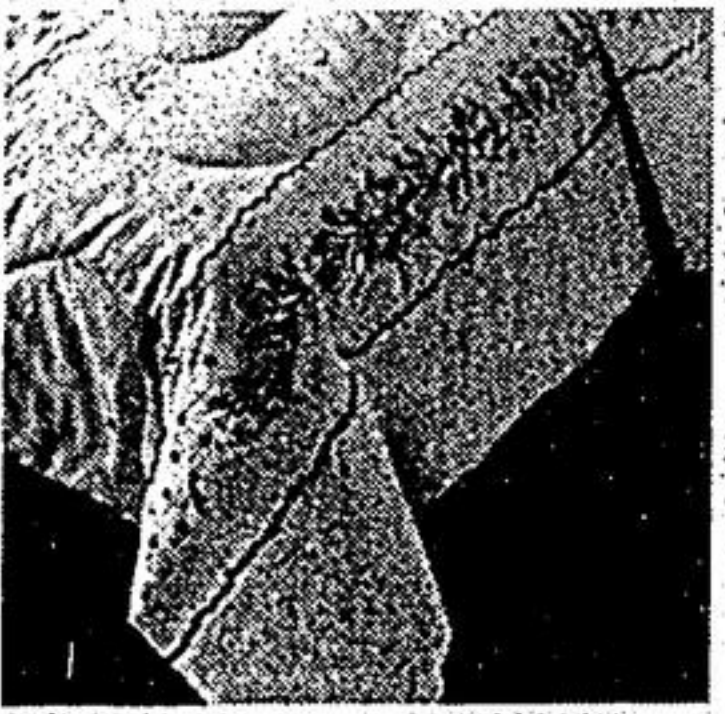

Congregational representatives are: Edith Byer (Hagerman); Lys Laurence (Cedar Grove); George Reesor (Steele's); and Mary Lou Reesor (Wideman).
