Top homes

COPPINS' CORNERS - Builders John Tomasoni and Mario Dell Serra's 32-home development in this hamlet is a typical example of how abandoned gravel pits can be reclaimed and put to good use. The houses are situated on half-acre lots with a magnificent north-south view. Seven designs are available, incorporating floor plans of 20,000 square feet or more. Clients may purchase empty lots and have their "dream house" custom built if they prefer. Prices range from $75,000 upward for a bungalow with double garage and enormous basement. Quality is the keynote of construction, even to kiln-dried, finished eight by two inch joists. In these days of rising prices and indifferent building techniques, these homes are an eye-opener. Undoubtedly they will sell quickly. Stouffville Real Estate, whose office is at the corner of highway 47 and 48 is handling the sale of homes.

Ford dealer

STOUFFVILLE - After a heated debate, Whitchurch Stouffville Planning Board has approved a proposal for a new Ford dealership. It will be located on Main Street West, between the pizzeria and Steerburger restaurant. Plans presented by Robert Franks faced a barrier when some councillors took offence to the number of signs slated for the business. A long debate on the matter of "sign pollution" ended when planning board agreed to accept the plans with an amendment permitting only two signs, instead of the proposed three. Council was firm in their demand that the establishment's appearance enhance the Main Street area. Mr. Frank's site will include extensive landscaping. Fines shrubbery and flowers will be planted. Councillor Jim Doble wants the new dealership to "set the standard" for future establishments, as well as "encourage other people to upgrade their facilities."

Lake estates

STOUFFVILLE - Michael Wade has been given the nod by Planning Board to proceed with plans for Island Lake Estates, though final approval is still pending. Located on 82 acres of land at Island Lake, the project is similar to his estate residential subdivision called Bristol Ponds in Uxbridge. The site includes 17 acres of lake and 24 acres of open space. There will be nineteen lots in all, ranging in size from 1.5 to 2.5 acres. None of the homes will be visible from the road, the spokesman said. To protect the lake, there are two pages of restrictions including a ban on motor boats. Councillors Jim Doble and Becky Wedley considered the lake as unique and should be preserved for use by the general public, not just private residents. They stressed only a few people would use the area, so there would be no disruption to local residents, and the area could be policed. But Councillor Bill Kamps wondered who "we should be paying out" taxes to police it when there are plenty of other beaches where people can go. Both he, Planning Board chairperson June Button, and Councillor Bill McNealley felt no one could guarantee it would be a well-maintained park, free of problems. They added the lake was too small to serve as an area for public recreation. Mayor Eldred King said he doesn't believe land can accommodate both a residential and recreational use. He added, they don't mix. "The best way to preserve the lake is to keep people away from it," he concluded.
