A talent in Art

"Eight is just right"

By JIM THOMAS
GOODWOOD — Eight Is Enough is a popular weekly television program.

That family is comparable to the one sixteen year old Vanessa Woodhouse knows. For she has five sisters and two brothers and wouldn't want it any other way.

She along with Vana, Virginia, Veronica and Vonda still live at home. Two brothers and a sister are married. Vince lives at Vivian; Victor at Newmarket and Vicky on the Bethesda Sideroad.

She likes the way they can share one another's clothes. "It's also nice at Christmas," she says, admitting that there's giving as well as receiving to be considered.

A student at Port Perry High, her favorite subject is Art. Later on, she may expand on this talent.

Vanessa could be busy every evening babysitting. She and Veronica both have paper routes. In her spare time, she lends a hand around the house, something she doesn't mind in the least.

Her association with Markham Centennial Baptist Church is important, she says, particularly the Young People's Organization called "Word of Life". They attend as a family, something she's grown up with since very young. Her mother's a department superintendent and Vanessa helps out in the Sunday School during the summer months when regular teachers are on vacation.

The pretty teenager admits there's not an awful lot to do in Goodwood, but voices no complaint. "I like it the way it is," she says. Roller skating and tennis are two favorite sports. When younger, she rode horses quite a bit but not now, although she'd still like to have one of her own.

Deep sea diver heads for Brazil

STOUFFVILLE — Peter Hamilton, Glengall Lane, Stouffville, recently completed six months of training in a deep sea diving course.

The instruction, provided at Wilmington, California, will enable Peter to participate in diving operations at offshore oil installations around the world.

A graduate of Stouffville Dist. Secondary School in 1975, Peter first became interested in it as a sport when he joined the Uxbridge Diving Club and came in contact with instructor Larry Olson. He convinced him of what the future could hold if he made it a career. At the time, he was employed in a very good paying job with General Motors in Scarborough.

Peter graduated July 12, placing second out of 175 students. So far, he's already spent 200 hours under water including 54 hours at one time in a deep sea chamber.

As a kind of initiation, he accepted a job with the Los Angeles Harbor Commission and, assisted by five other students, was able to retrieve a six hundred pound boom that had sunk to the bottom. They did it in only 48 hours.

"We did it for the experience," Peter said, admitting that the pay hardly came close to the $700 a day earned by top oil well divers. Their remuneration was eighteen bottles of Mexican beer.

Next stop for Peter Hamilton is Brazil where the diving season extends through twelve months of the year. Before leaving, he will enrol in a four-week underwater photography course in Toronto.

What of the future? Some day, Peter hopes to operate his own business in the charter and salvage field. Regardless, he'll be seeing things from a different perspective, an area that most people know nothing about.
