

Happy birthday Around Town

By JoAnn Thompson STOUFFVILLE — Ida Victoria McCaughan attributes her long, healthy life to hard work, vitamins, and old-fashioned home-cooking. She celebrated her 90th birthday, Feb. 4.

Along with an assortment of floral bouquets and cards, she received a plaque from Premier William Davis in honor of this milestone.

Born in Huron County, about 12 miles south-west of Seaforth, her father, Auguste

Kiehne operated a lucrative blacksmithing business there. Her mother, the former Victoria Kners, emigrated from Germany as a child.

Although she was baptized Agatha, she prefers her friends call her Ida.

It was at 15 she left the family farm and moved to Seaforth. There she worked in a hotel — cleaning, cooking, and waiting on tables.

She met her late husband, Archie, in Toronto, and they were married in 1917. They stayed in the city for almost 30 years before moving to their 'dream home' on three acres of land, a few miles west of Claremont.

Now, Ida lives in a comfortably-decorated apartment at Success Square, and although she enjoys her abode, she admits she misses her home in the country. It's hard to adjust to town life after 11 years of residing in a rural setting, she says.

The one hobby she misses most is her gardening. That's why there are so many plants in her living room. Violets are favorites.

Mrs. McCaughan attends St. James Presbyterian Church every Sunday, and enjoys taking walks when the weather is nice and the sidewalks bare.

Ida would like to travel to Florida, but she has a fear of planes.

It's rare that she'll purchase baked goods. She'd just as soon make her own.

"It keeps me busy," she says. It's easy to see that this is her key to happiness, and a long and vibrant life.

IDA MCCAUGHAN

Holiday

"It was wonderful." That's how Mr. W.G. Flowers of Albert Street North described his recent trip to England where he visited his two sisters. As for the plane ride, "I loved it", he said.

If you believe owning a home is a right of the average Canadian

Before the election, the Clark government had introduced a mortgage and property tax credit that would make home ownership easier in the '80's. 3.5 million Canadian families would have received up to $375 this year and up to $1500 by 1982. Thousands of jobs would have been created in the homebuilding industry.

The Liberals and the NDP voted against it. Help to homeowners is a real change Canadians want.

If you believe Canada must rely on its own energy resources

Before the election, the Clark government's policy for energy self-sufficiency was its first priority. Under the Clark government plan, oil prices will rise to realistic levels to encourage the development of Canadian oil sources but Canadian prices will always be 15% less than American prices.

The gasoline tax will pay for an energy tax credit for low and middle income Canadians and help now to pay the ever-increasing cost of foreign oil. There will be no tax on heating oil.

A new tax on the profits of the multi-national oil companies will provide $6 billion to finance new energy projects like improved urban transit and alternate energy sources.

Higher prices will encourage conservation, but so will aid programs to convert oil furnaces to cheaper natural gas and assistance for home insulation.

World events have proven how vital the policy of energy self-sufficiency is to Canada's future.

If you believe you have a right to know what you're voting for

Before the election, the Clark government had begun to make the changes that Canada needs. Prime Minister Clark and his cabinet ministers have clearly defined their policies.

The Trudeau Liberals are asking you to vote for an imaginary team and non-existent policies. Most of their former stars are not running because they can't work with Trudeau.

Trudeau is promising more of the one-man rule that turned his cabinet off and disappointed Canadians. All he has to offer is more of what didn't work in the '70's.

Prime Minister Clark and his government recognize there are solutions to the problems facing Canadians, and that we have the potential to meet those challenges in the '80's.

The Clark government was making real changes to guarantee Canada a secure future.

Take a look at answers for the 80's

If you believe curbing inflation begins with sound economic management

Before the election, the Clark government was restoring confidence in our economy and our dollar. The new budget was an honest and realistic plan for the '80's which controlled government spending and halted Canada's plunge into debt.

Financial critics called the Clark budget "courageous" and "disciplined". The Liberals and the NDP say deficits don't matter. Their approach didn't work in the '70's and won't work in the '80's. Responsible economic management is a real change Canada must have.

If you believe Canada should pull its weight in the world

Before the election, the Clark government had begun to undo the damage of Trudeau's policy that weakened our Armed Forces and reduced our commitment to NATO. The Clark government will strengthen our Armed Forces and meet our obligations to our allies.

Recent events have shown Canada can be an influential partner in the Western Alliance with a government committed to pulling our weight.

If you believe small businesses, farmers, and fishermen deserve a break

Before the election, the Clark government introduced a budget which would let you pay wages to a spouse who works with you and deduct the cost from your taxable income. The budget created special bonds to cut your interest costs in half. The budget allowed farmers and fishermen a 10¢ a gallon gasoline tax credit. The Clark government recognizes that Canada grows when small businesses grow.

Real change deserves a fair chance

Monday, vote Progressive Conservative.

It's the diversity and challenge involved in dealing with a number of very different clients, ranging from a multi-million dollar foreign company to a one-man antique store that makes Gerry's job so exciting. And by keeping clients to a manageable number, Gerry finds he can spend more time with each of them and become involved in a wide range of financial management and auditing services. "I am faced with such a variety of problems from day to day that it keeps the imagination working overtime."
