Hockey association holds annual meeting

STOUFFVILLE — church-Stouffville Minor Hockey Association, May 1. Association members unanimously voted to retain the body contact rule which bans hitting in Stouffville's house leagues. After Past-

President Eldon Wagg commented on the success of the rule in its first year, a motion was carried extending it indefinitely.

Many league members voiced their hope that body contact will soon be banned at all levels of minor hockey, so greater emphasis can be placed on skills such as skating, shooting and passing.

The association fully supports planned attempts to organize coach and manager clinics.

With all coaches and managers certified, it is hoped that hockey will be more enjoyable for all involved.

It was also agreed that a letter be sent to parents before a season explaining the procedures to be followed when a player misses games. If there is not sufficient notification from the parents as to the reason for continued absence, a player faces the possibility of being expelled from the league for the balance of the season.
