No spirit

Mr. Editor:

I don't live in Stouffville, so perhaps my opinion doesn't count. However, if I did, I'm sure I wouldn't object to the sounding of a fire siren should one of the local teams be so fortunate as to win a regional or provincial championship.

How many times a year is this likely to happen? Maybe twice or three times if you're lucky? So why all the fuss?

Compared to the number of times the siren sounds at night for "legitimate" reasons, this is peanuts.

Rather than sit back and complain, I'd be out on the street, joining in the celebration. This, in my opinion, is what "community" is all about. Long may it last.

Sincerely,
Erik Jorganson

A privilege

Dear Mr. Thomas:

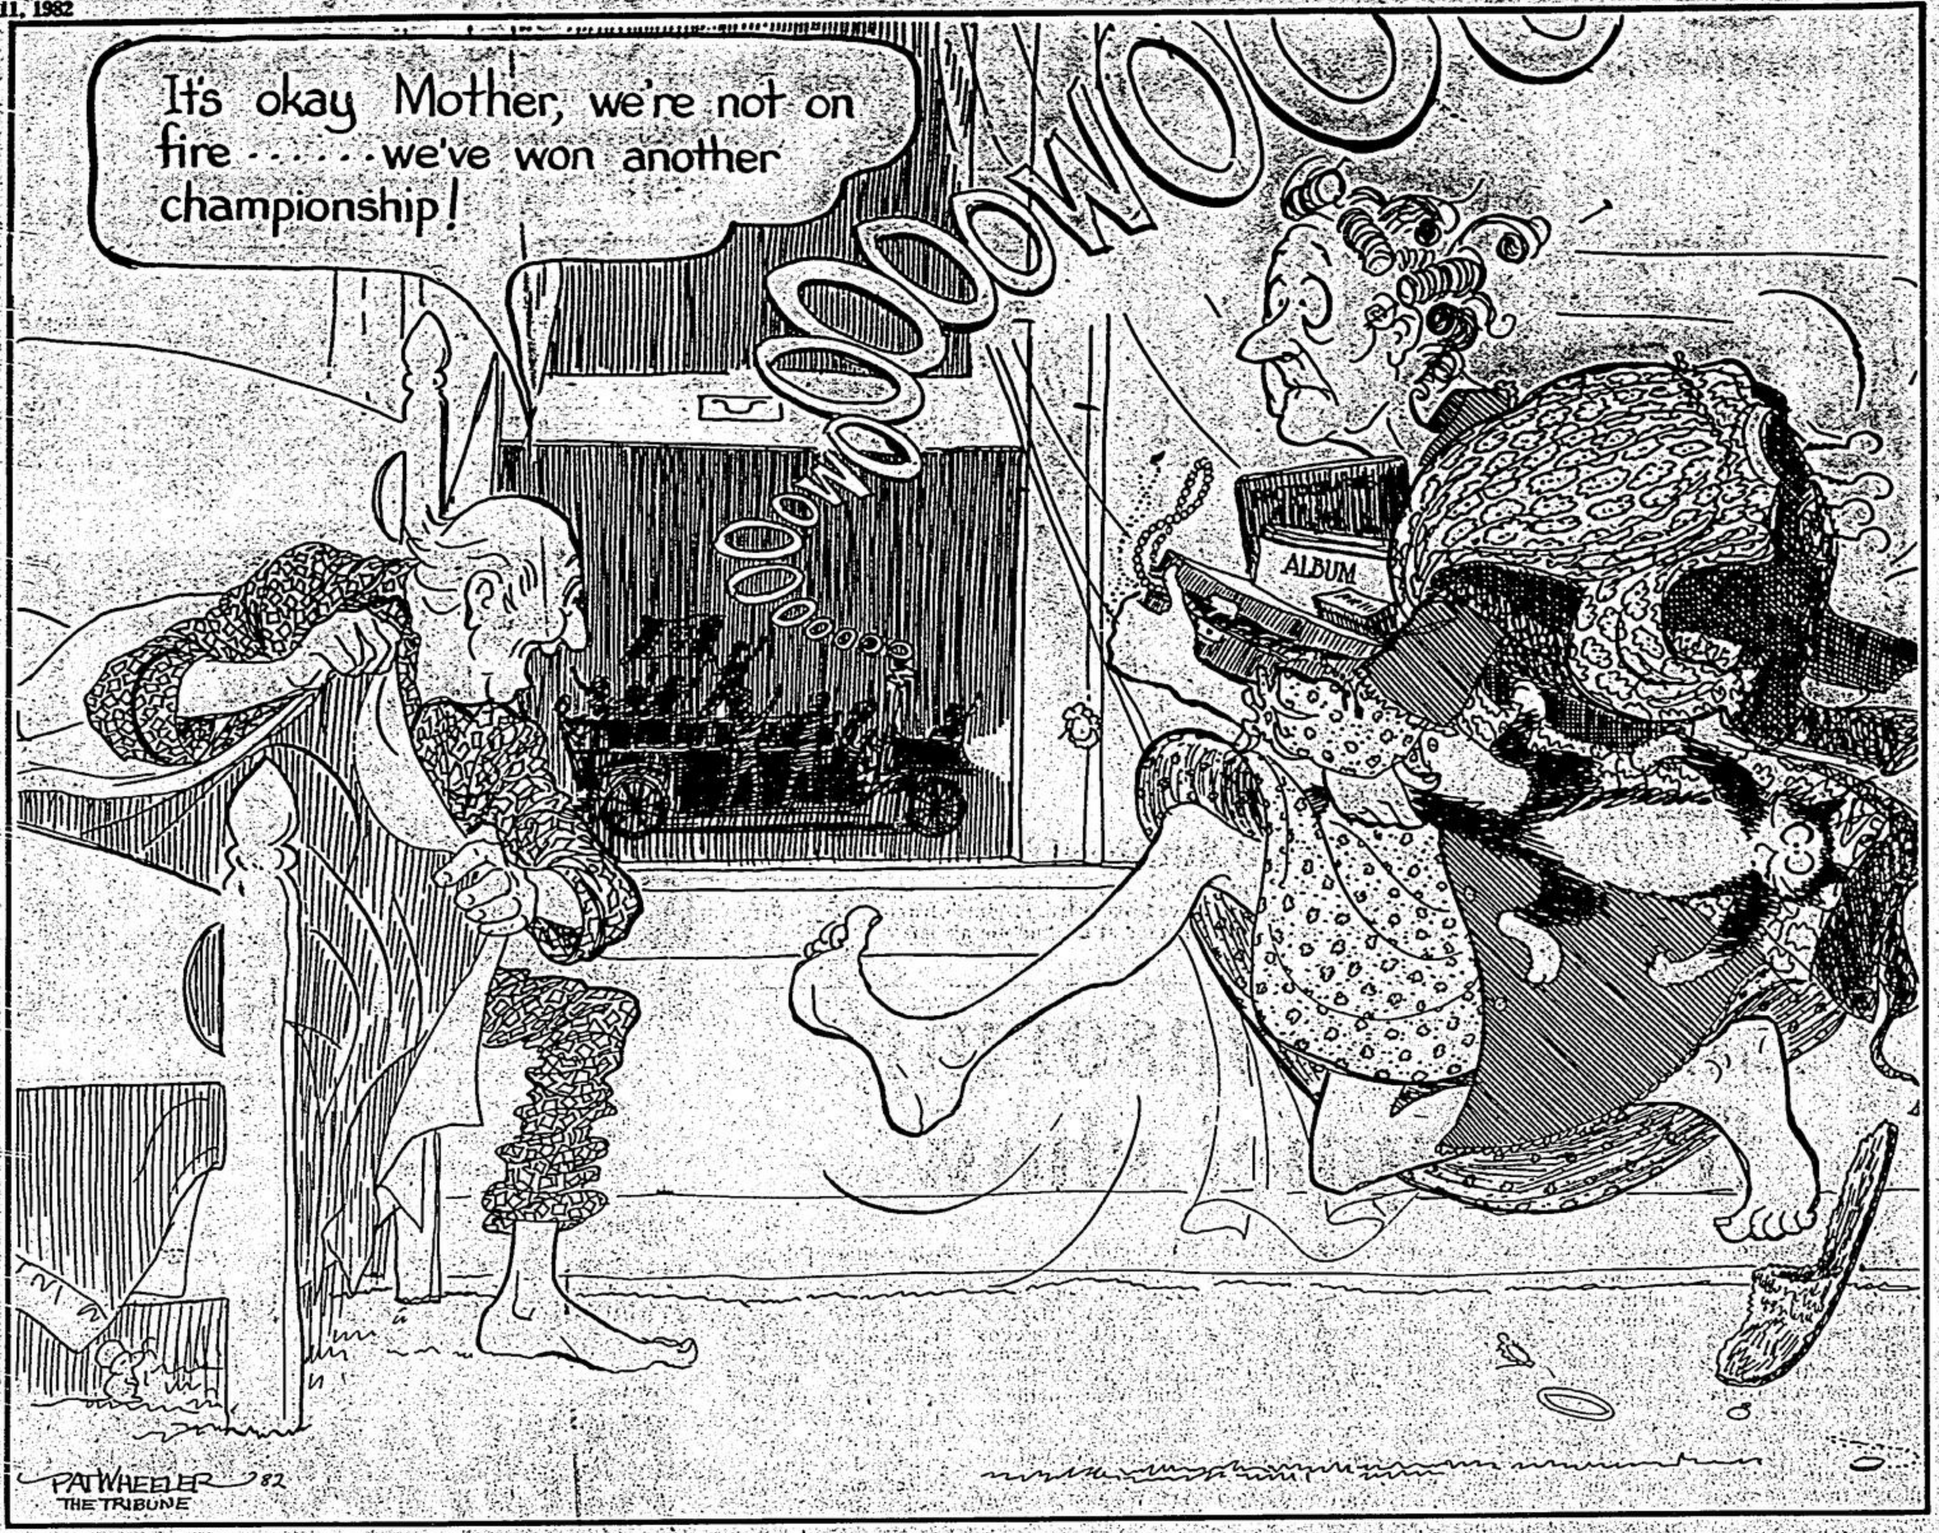
A decision by the Fire Chief to cancel "processionals" on Main Street after a sporting team wins a Title, seems to be the talk of the town.

Last Thursday (after your paper came out), I heard it mentioned in almost every conversation. Some of the opinions were interesting. Here's mine.

I feel a few blasts of the siren, heralding a championship, represents a minimal "inconvenience" for residents. For myself, I'd consider it a privilege to be awakened for such a reason, just as I consider it a privilege to live in a town like Stouffville where accomplishments of this kind are considered important enough to warrant a "spin up the street" on the fire truck.

I remember thirty years ago, when I was a lad of sixteen, our team won a provincial title. When we arrived home triumphant, there was nothing, not even the sounding of a single horn. I never forgot it. Don't let this happen here.

Sincerely,
Fred Wright,
Manitoba Street,
Stouffville.



It's okay Mother, we're not on fire.....we've won another championship!
