A sick joke

Dear Editor:
I would hope you would publish this letter so that people who put things in Halloween hand-outs can see and feel some very tangible results for their efforts.

As I stood on Manitoba Street, Halloween night talking with a neighbor about all parents' concerns over "Halloween Horribles", I found myself reassuring this lady that in communities like Stouffville this can't really happen, after all in such communities people care.

After Halloween night, I sat down with my children and like all parents very carefully went over their treat bags, discarding imperfect packaging, questionable candy, in short about 10-15%. You can imagine my absolute horror a little later when I saw in the discarded wrapper of a candy bar my boy had eaten, a small hand written note in red ink "Look for needles!!"

We went through a night of nightmares and following days of worry and agony over what else had invaded our home - compounded when one of our children became violently ill the next day.

Since I walked the route with my children, I know the area this joke came from, and I live in this area, Church Street North and Manitoba Street, and I feel the person or persons concerned should be told their efforts achieved horror, dread, fear and helplessness, above all helplessness. What a wonderful joke you "unbowed duckling" only I think the joke sooner or later will be on you. It is quacks like you that are changing our world, our community, our children. Thirty or forty years from now when you may need understanding, trust and help, this world, this community may show you what real helplessness is all about.

I have only two fervent desires for you, either you feel the harm you can do and change or the sooner you are plucked and hung in a window the better off we will all be.

Sincerely,
Robin Brock,
25 Duchess Street,
Stouffville.

A real treat

Dear Editor:
I am writing in regard to Halloween night.

I might be prejudiced, because I live on Lloyd Street in Stouffville, and believe it to be a very nice street on which to live, but to make it this way, it takes the people.

I was very much impressed as I answered the door to the "Trick or Treaters", to find that almost every time a child, or children left the door, to turn down the steps, a voice in the dark would say, "Did you say thank you?"

Children are being taught by some parents and in most cases, it shows as they grow up. Keep up the good work Mom and Dad.

Sincerely,
Dorothy Wagg,
Lloyd Street,
Stouffville.

Armed robbery

STOUFFVILLE - A Stouffville area man has been committed to trial in County Court after his counsel waived the hearing of evidence.

Thomas Smith is charged with armed robbery and with having a dangerous weapon in his possession while committing an indictable offense.

The accused was arrested by York Regional Police, July 25. The trial date will be set Dec. 8.
