Unique art show

STOUFFVILLE — The Latham Gallery's April art exhibit is open with a photographic series called "Immigrant Women" by Deborah Barnet.

Ms. Brandt, from Toronto, is currently working as a sociologist in Nicaragua. Her display includes photo essays on Central American subjects, in which the images are linked with related text.

The exhibition includes eighteen black-and-white photographs depicting situations ranging from the Latin American woman who has been forced to leave her country for Canada, to the rural woman who has been forced to move to the provincial capital because of the industrialization of agriculture. Ms. Brandt has used her photography for research and education towards social change in Peru, Nicaragua and Canada. She has involved immigrant workers in Toronto in making community self-portraits and she takes a humanitarian view toward her subject matter. Her work has also been shown at the Etobicoke Civic Centre and she has done workshops at the New Brunswick Craft School. The exhibit will be on display until April 28.

The Latham Gallery is located in the Whitechurch Street and is open during regular library hours.
