Coats are accented

Fall 1983 promises to be an exciting fashion season, and wrapping up the latest looks are the new coats and jackets.

Coats are full-cut this year, in line with the current silhouettes. They are roomy, but refined...over-sized, but not overwhelming.

The new swing coats capture the spirit of fall fashion beautifully, and they're seen in both long and short versions, the former sometimes princess-styled.

Classic looks are still in evidence, but with new fullness. The polo coats, the mannish overcoat, the trench coat, the balmacaan and the clutch coat — they've all been updated for fall.

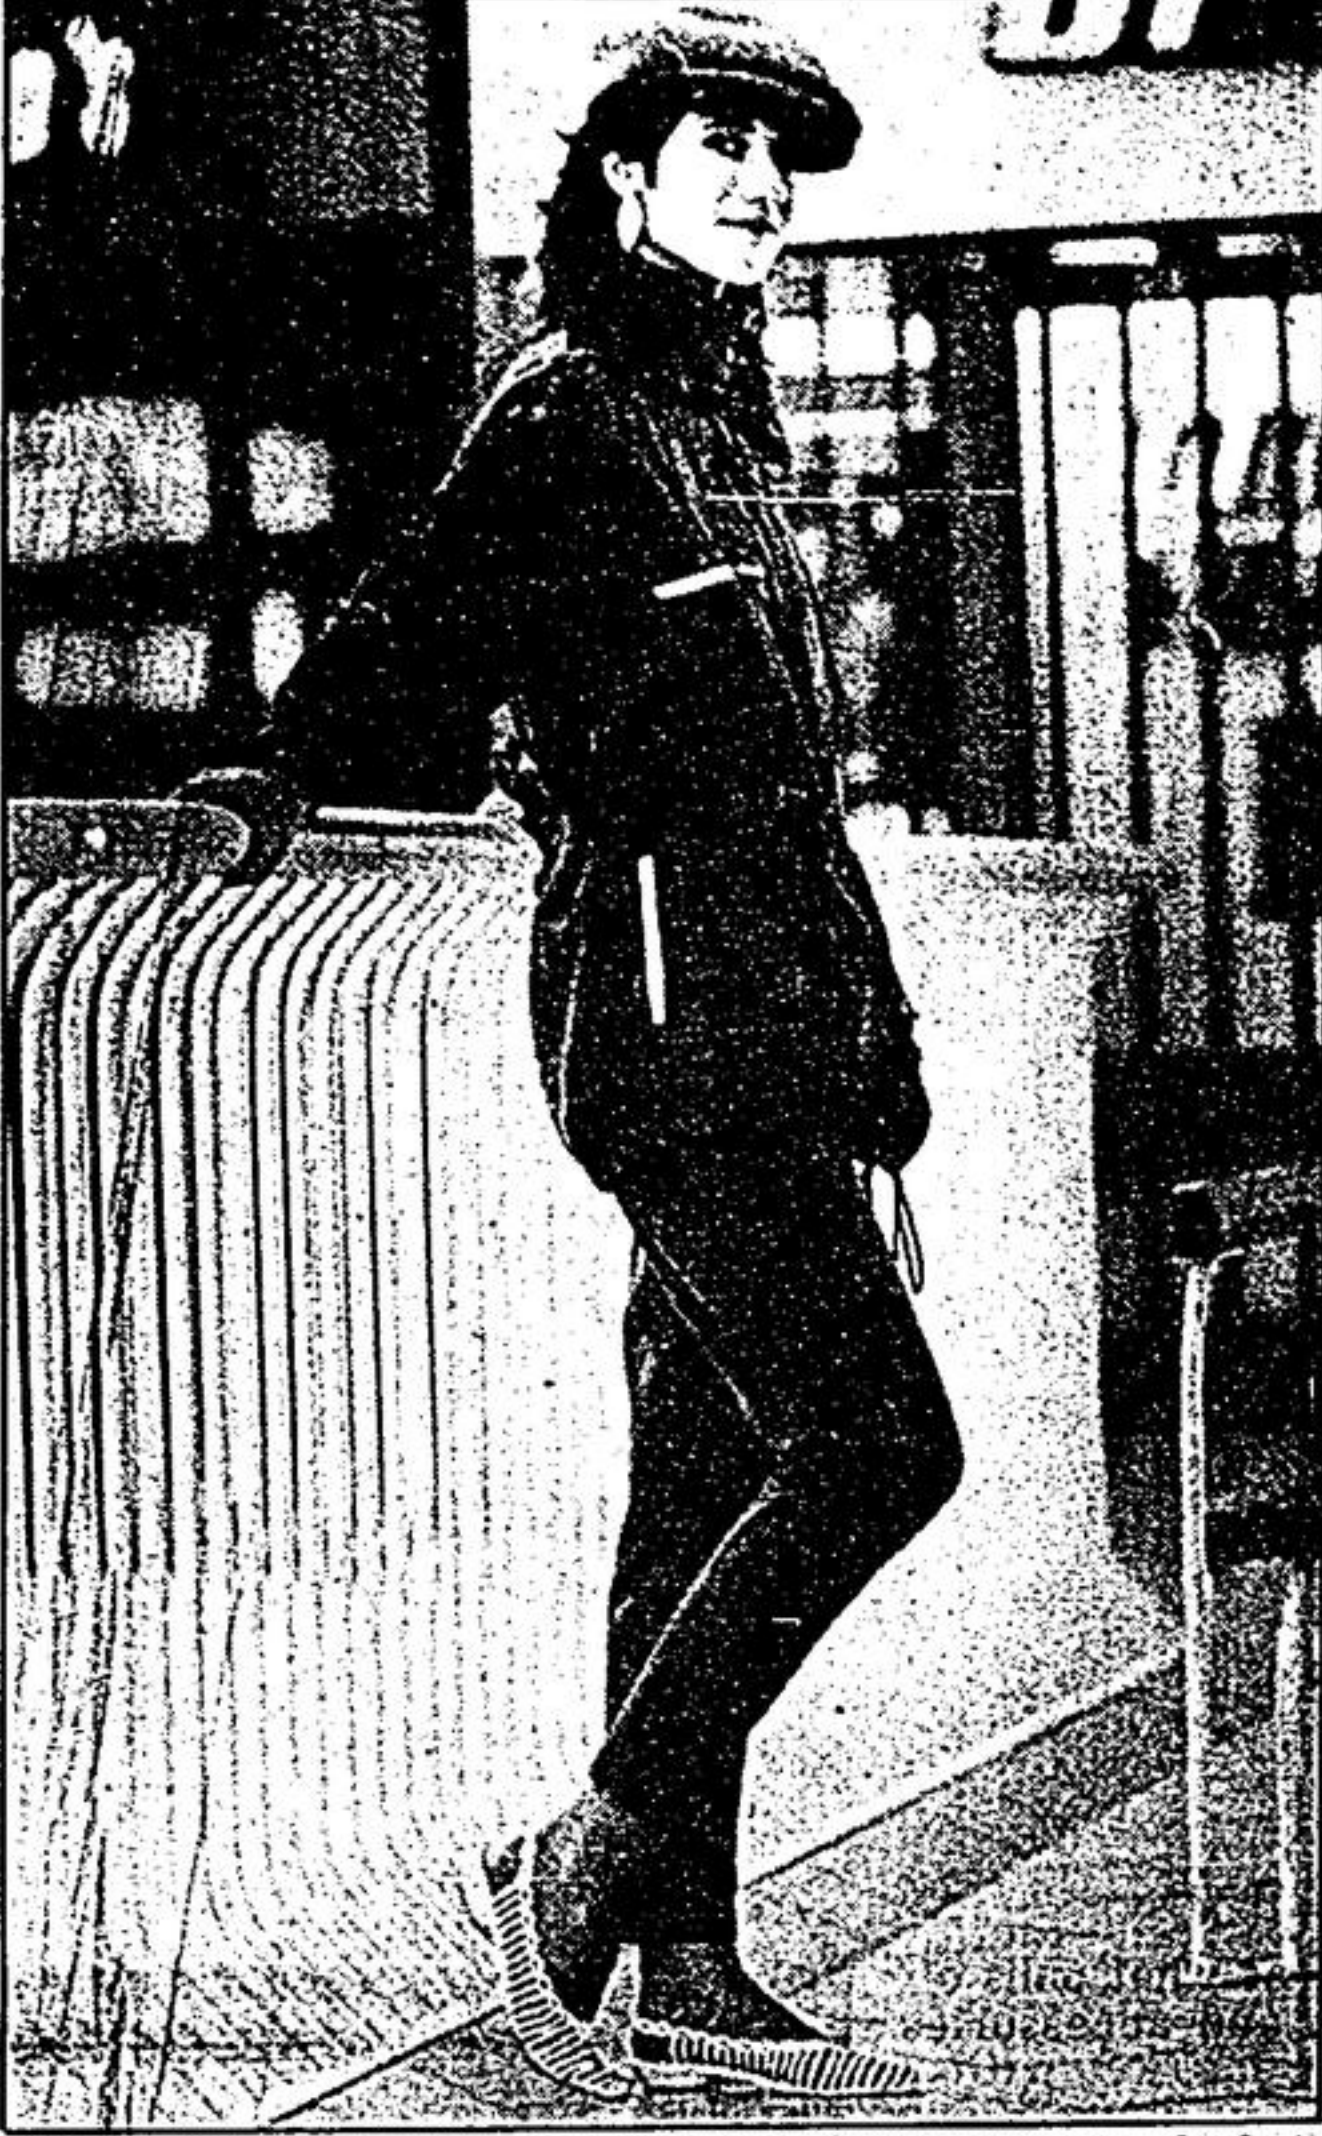

An important fabric this season is tweed, cut generously into great coats that complement the newer silhouettes.

Velour plushes, houndstooth wools, wool meltons, wool herringbones and mohairs are other fall favorites.

Reflecting the importance of sweaters this season are the latest sweater coats, easy and elongated, either knit or woven.

Just as newsworthy are those coats that are matched to skirts or pants for an outstanding ensemble look this season.

Fur trims soften the somewhat mannish look of many new fall coats, while adding a touch of opulence. Braid and leather are other accents this season.
