Styles hard to keep

BY GREG COATES
 Keeping up with the latest styles is always a difficult task, especially when fashions change almost from season to season. What's considered "in" now, may be long gone and on the "out" list by Christmas.
 Last week The Tribune surveyed a number of SDSS students to find out what they're wearing this fall. This week it's the elementary students turn.
 Of the students we talked to, most agreed that casual wear is the most popular. Rugged pants, track suits and polo shirts are all very big this year.
 Jeans, as at the high school, are not near as popular as they once were. And the jeans that are being worn are dressy, not faded and worn out.
 According to 12-year-old Jason Bloye, a Grade 8 student at Orchard Park P.S., most of the boys are wearing rugged pants these days.

 "Jeans are not near as popular now that rugged pants are in," he said, adding that the styles for guys never really change too much. "It's always been casual, I think the girls are a little more dressy."
 James Hume, a Grade 8 at Summitview P.S., agreed noting that besides rugged pants, the guys are wearing pretty much the same as they always have.
 "You see a lot of rugged pants and sports shirts, but other than that it's just the usual jeans and T-shirts," he said.
 The girls are wearing everything from jeans (provided they're dressy) to mini-skirts.
 Thirteen-year-old Kelly Watling, who is in Grade 8 at Orchard Park P.S. noted that bright colors — for both tops and pants — are very popular with the girls.
 "I think the girls basically wear what they want to," she said. "Rugged pants and cords are both common. You don't see too many skirts and dresses."

 Most of the students agreed that running shoes are still the most popular form of footwear, especially with the guys. The girls are also wearing Peter Pan getaway boots.
 "Running shoes are worn right into the winter," said Shawn Morrison, 13, a Grade 7 student at Summitview P.S. "We try to get away with them as long as possible."
 While most of the styles begin in Metro Toronto, the students feel that Stouffville's fashions are up-to-date.
 "Everything starts in the city, but we're not too far behind," said Jason Bloye. "It's surprising how quickly they (fashions) get here."
 Making the "out" (or on the way out) list were headbands, faded jeans and cowboy or western wear.
