Rights' speaker

Still much to be done

STOUFFVILLE — Canon Borden C. Purcell, Chairman of the Ontario Human Rights Commission, pulled no punches in his remarks from the pulpit of Christ Church (Anglican), Stouffville, Sunday.

The speaker praised Canada's role in the world struggle for justice and peace. At the same time, he criticized the treatment of native Indians and Japanese-Canadians during World War II.

· With respect to Indians, he said "this is no jewel in Canada's crown". Of Japanese-Canadians, he called their treatment "inhuman".

"We must do a great deal of soulsearching in this regard," he stated. Canon Purcell challenged the congregation to show a greater respect for New Canadians; for women in the work force; for the elderly and the handicapped.

The speaker pointed to the fact only three handicapped persons had been hired by Metropolitan Toronto over a period of ten years. Last year, however, 85 were hired and their employers are extremely pleased, he said. · The Human Rights advocate dealt the Anglican Parish a rap on the knuckles for its slow-to-action response on equality for women. "We, let the women, raise the money, but we don't let them spend it," he stated. He chided the church, claiming if Eaton's and Simpson's treated women so unfairly, they'd be charged.

Canon Purcell said too often, individuals throw up their hands in despair, saying

"what does it matter?" "The struggle," he concluded, "involves each one of us".

Dining with Cal

I'm firmly convinced that we in the York-Durham Regions can survive! After fifteen years of business travel, it's been my good fortune to experience some of the finest eating places in Ontario. In a series of articles, Cathryn and I hope to share with you, some of the likes (and dislikes) related to restaurants in this

First, I ask you to think of me, not as a connoisseur but more of a tour guide as we drop in on these establishments and attempt to impart our feelings to you the reader.

This week, we'll visit the Deer Park Inn, a secluded, warm and very diversified place. One finds a touch of class with the very elegant old-world furnishings nestled in the warm glow of a stone fireplace.

If reservations are not made, you may sit in the comfortable lounge area, while awaiting a table. Part of the pleasant evening is the hospitality offered by hosts Eric and Marg Farrell. Dinner here is not rushed but very relaxing. A tangy shrimp cocktail following the usual beforedinner drink, sets the mood.

The steak, medium well-done, seems to be a house specialty as well as a delicious offering of surf and turf enjoyed by Cathryn. The tender eight-ounce lobster tails and melt-in-your-mouth filet mignon are surrounded by perfectly cooked fresh vegetables. Complimented with a bottle of Prince de Galles Anjou, the main course is exquisite.

Other diners seem to enjoy a fine fare of succulant rack of lamb. Following the superb dinner, a delightful offering of tantilizing cakes and pastries are presented. Instead, we elect to go downstairs where a five-piece band entertains, and people feel comfortable dancing or lounging in high-backed chairs. The music is contemporary and this very professional band has offered many enjoyable evenings to Prices for two, with drinks, range from $40 to $50. The location is Concession 10, Whitchurch-Stouffville, a mile north of Main Street. Next week our tour will take us to the Old Country Inn at Unionville.
