People who care

Dear Editor:
With regard to the letter published in the Jan 11 issue of The Tribune from "Reluctant Mother-To-Be", I wish to say I've been working with unwed mothers-to-be for fifteen years. Here, there is help available.

There is no easy solution for girls who find themselves in this position. They require much help and counselling. Keeping a baby, for a single girl, is very difficult. It's also difficult to give a baby up for adoption. We help each girl as much as we can through visitations on a regular basis. We know of places where she can stay if she requires accommodation. We talk to her about the advantages and disadvantages of keeping or giving up the baby for adoption, her legal rights, etc. We also help a girl during and after the baby is born. If necessary, we assist during the adjustment period that follows.

When a girl gives her baby up for adoption, we place the child in a Christian home. We provide non-identifying information, which enables her to feel more at ease about the adoption.

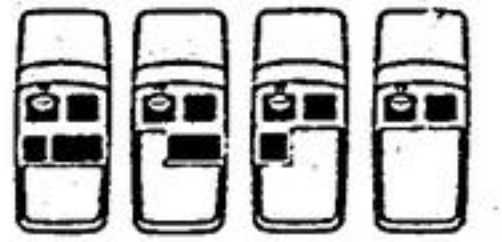

I'm available to talk to any girl, to her family or to the father of the baby-to-be. My phone number is 294-1827.

The Stouffville-Markham Christian Action Council is looking for a place where a Crisis Pregnancy Centre can be established. At this location, girls can go for counselling. The Council realizes the need for such a service in the community, a place where unwed mothers-to-be can visit and talk about the life they carry.

Sincerely,
Noreen Wardlaw,
