A 4-H leader is a special person

By Barbara Dyszuk
WANTED—an enthusiastic, patient, community-oriented person with an interest in rural youth. Should have skills in organization, communications, conducting meetings, evaluation and be willing to continually update these skills. Must be able to work with people, some travel, long hours, unlimited interests; no salary but lasting rewards.

What's the job title?
A 4-H leader!
Over 6,000 adults volunteer every year to be club leaders in Ontario's 4-H program because they enjoy the opportunities 4-H offers. Their duties depend, to some extent, on their location, their club and their individual talents but, one-day training workshops will prepare them for specific projects.

Many 4-H club leaders held prepare club programs. Most present the lesson material to their members and pass on some of the training they have received. Club leaders check project books, some make visits to each of their members and some assist with regional programs such as Achievement Days.

But all 4-H club leaders help our province's young people by teaching them skills, developing their individual talents and feelings of self-worth, providing opportunities for new experiences, listening to them and by encouraging them to "learn by doing"—the 4-H motto.

Every November, five of Ontario's 4-H leaders attend the National 4-H Leaders' Conference in Toronto. Later, five outstanding leaders, along with Ontario's delegates from the three previous years, become part of the Ontario 4-H Leaders' Committee.

Ontario's 4-H leaders make our program the success it is. Treat them with care.
