House move is postponed

By DOROTHY REESER

Wouldn't you know it? The Brown House didn't get moved as scheduled. There has been a delay in preparation and the move will be in about two weeks.

LACAC is investigating the Fuller House on the east side of Woodbine Ave. to designate it as a historic building. It was built in 1850 and is in very good condition.

The Village Forge at the corner of Woodbine and 16th Ave. was designated last year to be preserved.

Two Weddings

Last Saturday, Brown's Corners United Church was the scene of two weddings.

At the first, Michael Hammond and Barbara Schulte, a policeman and police-woman from Pickering, were married. They anticipate living in the Markham area in the future.

The second wedding was that of David McNeil, and Lynda Miles. Lynda is the daughter of Councillor Elson Miles and his wife Joyce.

Dave is a recent graduate of University of Toronto in Forestry. He has a job in Espanola, Ont., and will take his bride to live in their newly purchased home in nearby Webbwood.

Many guests attended the wedding and enjoyed a reception following at The Prince Hotel, York Mills.

"Mayor" Carole Bell, Lynda's employer and a family friend, proposed a toast to the bride. Among the guests was Dave's 100-year-old grandmother.

Size and appearance questioned

Unionville residents upset over shopping centre plans

Everything from the appearance to the size of a proposed shopping complex on Hwy. 7 just east of Kennedy Rd. has raised objections from concerned neighbors.

"I'm concerned with the architecture, it looks to me like a cross between neo-Markham and pseudo-Renaissance," said Al Brown, a resident who lives two doors west of the site. "It looks the same as the Markham Library which I'm not enamoured of."

He was speaking at a public meeting held by the planning committee to consider the amendment of a bylaw which would zone most of the land in question special commercial. The northwest corner, however, must be zoned differently because it is located in a flood hazard area where no structures can be built.

Mr. Brown was most concerned about the kind of commercial businesses are going into the proposed building. A special commercial zoning means it can be used for retail uses normally found outside of shopping centres such as furniture, appliances, Brewers' Retail, banks, and restaurants.

"What will be the effect on lifestyle and on traffic which is bad enough now?" he asked the committee.

Assistant planning director Ron Bose explained that the use of land is effectively controlled by the amount of parking space available. In this case there will be 90 spaces.

"I trust the restaurant won't be a tavern with live entertainment?" asked Mr. Brown.

He was also irked that the company behind the proposed complex has no name, but is numbered (551061 Ontario Ltd.).

"I wish I knew what it was called," he said. "I hate to deal with an anonymous company."

The placing of the building is unusual because it will be built right on the lot line of the property. Instead of the six metres usually required on each side yard, there will be 12 metres in the form of a rear access driveway through the middle of the complex.

"They're putting too big a building on too small a lot," Mr. Brown cautioned explaining he is an anthropologist concerned with lifestyle and the quality of life.

He was afraid developers would take out trees and top soil and "maybe in 50 years, you'll have some trees again."

He suggested the Town follow the example of Germany's Black Forest area where whenever a tree is cut down, two are planted.

Another resident owning land to the east of the development said he believed the zero-lot line unfair.

"I don't think I should have to build against another building," said John Jameson, who owns property to the east of the site. "It will obstruct the view of anything I want to build on the lot and I'll be forced to use the same architecture."

He also pointed out that he had been told to build a 30-ft. landscaping strip in front of his Nissan dealership two doors down while the new development is only required to build a 20-ft. strip.

Planning director Tom Januszewski told the committee that 30-ft. strips are required on arterial roads and highways.

"I challenge you to find another 30-ft. strip on Hwy. 7 besides mine," said Mr. Jameson, adding he'd been "unfairly done by" because the extra landscaping had cost him money and parking spaces.

The committee asked Mr. Jameson to appear before the administrative committee to discuss the matter further, and Mr. Januszewski was asked to make a report. The public meeting was adjourned to Sept. 18.

Dog owners unaware of bylaw: resident

A Thornhill woman disgusted with unwanted gifts left by dog-owners and their dogs thought she'd do something about it.

In a letter to Markham Town Council, Donna Steffoff suggested that a copy of the Stoop and Scoop Bylaw 74-71 be attached to each dog licence as well as to each resident's tax statement.

She also suggested distributing a copy of the bylaw to each home through ratepayers' associations and advertising it in local papers.

"If each citizen were aware of the bylaw then he would keep inconsiderate dog owners in check," she concluded.

"This is a significant problem in our town," said Councilor Gord Landon. "It's one problem that's hard to deal with — dogs defecating on people's lawns."
