

Why the home on the left shouldn't be heated like the home on the right.

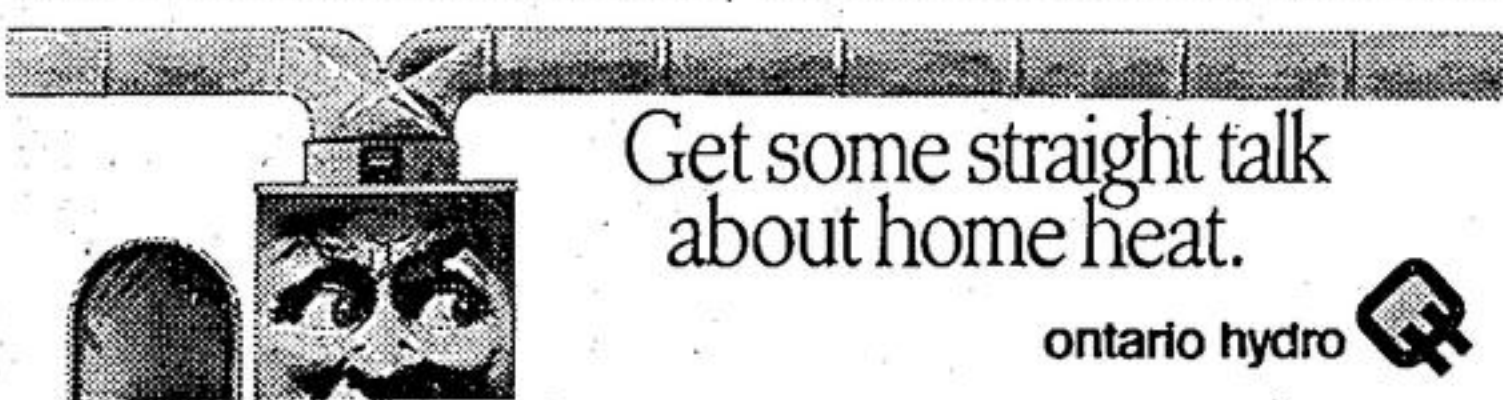

On the left? Bill and Kim, the twins, baby Sarah. They've revitalized their furnace with an electric plenum heater; it's one of the most economical ways to cut winter fuel bills. And they've turned the drafty old attic room into a warm nursery with insulation and inexpensive, easy-to-install baseboard heaters. There's a separate thermostat, so baby's room can be kept at exactly the right temperature without overheating the rest of the house.

On the right? Mike and Stella-empty-nesters. They've installed an add-on electric heat pump to help save money and heat their home in winter and they're looking forward to the comfort of air conditioning next summer. It was easy to add, cuts their heating costs and adds to the value of their home.

Electric heat provides homeowners with many options for either total or partial conversion. Whatever your needs, there's an electric system that's just right to help you cut costs, without cutting corners on comfort. Once you understand the flexibility of electric heat, other heats just don't look so hot.

Young people offered help

"No young person who wants to work should be prevented from doing so," says Don Cousens, MPP for York Centre.

"The Ontario government has announced a new training and on-the-job experience program for 1,500 hard-to-employ young people.

Anyone between the age of 15 and 24 with less than Grade 12 education is eligible. The program hopes to resolve the serious youth unemployment situation said Mr. Cousens.

Dr. Bette Stephenson, Minister of Education, who announced the program said it is aimed at young people who left school early and are now having difficulty finding a job.

"The program combines basic academic upgrading, skills training and life-skills counselling with on-the-job experience in businesses and industries to give these young men and women a new chance at finding steady employment," the minister said.

Trainees will be paid an allowance of $100-a-week throughout the program which lasts up to 42 weeks. Part of the time is spent acquiring job training and experience with participating businesses. There is no cost to employees.

The Ontario Youth Opportunities will be pleased to assist any young person looking for employment.

The All-Ontario number is 1-800-263-7777 or call Don Cousens Riding Office at 475-0021 for more information.
