Heavenly Bodies not very sophisticated

By IAN BAILEY
HEAVENLY BODIES: The formula for mindless entertainment behind such films as Rocky and Flashdance is the main ingredient in this combination of both movies. Take a character, add guts and spunk and provide a dream: It worked in the boxing ring, in the dance studio and although the results are corny, it hangs together here in an aerobics studio. Canadian actress Cynthia Dale plays Sam, the owner of an aerobics club whose name describes its product. Heavenly Bodies, Sam just wants to make people fit and happy, but she is opposed by a rival fitness magnate (Walter George Alton) who looks upon making people fit and happy as a good grief — a business. Nonetheless this movie has some thing "Flashdance" lacked to note that the results are just as significant. (AA) here is thin and corny. Dane and Base, have drawn every conceivable angle on aerobics into the story, including TV aerobics and an aerobic duel. It would be unfair to call this movie a 90-minute equivalent to the 20-minute work-out, but it's probably accurate to note that the results are just as significant. (AA) here is thin and corny. CAMPING ON WHEELS

Camping on Wheels is a show for the purist. The person like you who loves the freedom of taking to the road. And this year the show has moved to the Convention Centre at the base of the CN Tower, one of Toronto's most popular tourist attractions.

This new, bigger location means you can see even more Canadian-built recreational vehicles, all certified to CSA 2-240 quality and safety standards.

So whether you're thinking of making that first purchase or upgrading the vehicle you already have, come to the show that's been planned for you: The one designed for your pure recreational pleasure, and sure to be your road to the good life.
