

Guides, Brownies need leaders

The Markham Girl Guides and Brownies are in a "desperate situation" and need leaders for the next year, according to June Williams, a group leader in Markham.

"It's very difficult to get leaders in Markham with so many mothers out working," Mrs. Williams said.

She attributes the lack of current leaders to the "tremendous growth in Markham in the last five years," and said many young girls may have to be turned away.

She said they need "at least 20" to be able to accommodate the over 100 brownies graduating into guides. She added that there is a current waiting list of another 25 girls.

"These kids are keen and can't wait to get on, but we only have 53 openings right now," Mrs. Williams said.

She also pointed out that there are 108 girls waiting to join Brownies and another 45 wanting to join the Pathfinders group for girls aged 12 to 15.

"Another problem (the Girl Guides face) right now is a lack of facilities to hold meetings," Mrs. Williams pointed out that many of the schools and churches are already booked for other purposes.

"It's a super opportunity for mothers to work with their daughters," she said.

Working with guiding movements builds a strong relationship between a mother and daughter and friends as well.

She pointed out that new leaders would be trained by experienced ones and would be offered plenty of reference material to find out more about being a leader.
