

Players' play appreciated

To The Editor:
My wife and I would like to thank the Stouffville Players for a nice evening out May 24.
We came to your pretty town to see "Saving Grace" at Latham Hall.
The play was very funny and very well put together. Both the production crew and the director were great.

I think Elizabeth Ives-Ruyter is a fine actress. How on earth she carried all those lines and facial looks of happiness, surprise and delight without a falter, is a mystery to me. Alex Williams was easy to listen to and his punch lines made me enjoy him all the more.

He carried it all through well.

Brent McLeod is a newcomer, one could tell. But he was good. Acting, I guess, is like wine. It improves with maturity. Susan Bell was like Alex Williams, easy to watch and listen to. Bernie Leewood's place in the play was more difficult. Listening to all parts in English, then out comes Gregor Vanitsky—very difficult. But Bernie shoots for anything and most times, like in "Saving Grace," carries it off.

I found it very enjoyable—beautifully done.
Thank you Stouffville Players, I'll come again.

Sincerely,

Oliver N. Went,

Donated to hospital

This painting of a barn on the former Bunker Bros. farm, Ninth Line, Markham, was completed by Stouffville artist, Jim Bessey, (right), of Booth Drive. Mr Bessey has donated it to the Markham-Stouffville Hospital in memory of Harvey Bunker, a project supporter. Receiving the gift on behalf of the board is Keith Sutherland, fund-raising committee vice chairman.
