Region boosts
special funding for counselling

Families needing counselling from family life centres in Markham and Stouffville will be subsidized by York Region for up to $600 of help.

Regional Council increased the subsidy for individuals or families from $360, the 1984 figure.

In addition, Markham Family Life Centre will receive a maximum of $35,000 from the Region, while the Stouffville centre will have access to a maximum of $4,000.

The rates charged by each counsellor vary with the degree of experience and education he or she has. They range from $39-an-hour for someone with a post-graduate degree in social work or psychology to $17-an-hour for an intern in the lay counsellors program operated by the agency.
