

Cooper seeks another term

Ward 1 Trustee Charles Cooper is seeking another term with the York Region Board of Education. Mr. Cooper is the director of policy benefits for Canada Life. He lives in Thornhill and is married with two children.

Mr. Cooper, 52, is currently the chairman of the board's finance committee. He is also the founding member of the budget committee and has served on several committees including program, staff relations, futures and negotiations. "I enjoyed my first term and have no desire to be anything but a trustee and serve educational needs," said Mr. Cooper. "We have a good board and a good system and I want to do my bit to help out."

His concerns include the accommodation problem in York Region, the general status of students and technical education.

"I would also like to see the work of the budget committee continued," he said. "It's a very good process, a sane way of reviewing our financial situation from year to year."

History in action

Pickering Museum Village's History-In-Action weekend provided visitors a first-hand glimpse at the life of a Durham Region settler. Among the many interesting pioneer exhibits was a tool used for making wooden nails essential in the assembly of post-and-beam barns. Seven-year-old Nanette von Roeder (left) of Greenwood gives it a try, under the watchful eye of museum volunteer Brian Coady.

McGlynn seeks re-election to separate board

Separate school board Trustee Joseph McGlynn has announced he will run for re-election as trustee for Unionville.

Mr. McGlynn, a business interior consultant, has served on the York Region Roman Catholic Separate School Board since March, 1985. He was elected after former Markham Trustee Ernie Nyitrai resigned from the board.

Mr. McGlynn is currently a member of the board's education committee. One of his main concerns is the growing need for additional schools.

The need for more schools is increasing at an alarming rate in this area which is one of the fastest growing regions in all of Canada," said Mr. McGlynn. "I look forward to being able to continue serving this community as its trustee during these eventful times." Mr. McGlynn has been a resident of Markham for 14 years. He is married and has three children.
