

New pastor at Central United

David Reeve has big job

As the new pastor at Central United Church in Unionville, David Reeve sees one of his main tasks as integrating new church members with established ones.

The church is growing — literally as well as figuratively. An expansion is underway now which will add another 120 seats, making its capacity near 300 people.

"Right now people are crowded out into the aisles," he said.

Rev. Reeve comes from Thornhill United Church where he was pastor for six years.

He brings with him experience in counselling married couples, youth with drug-related problems and abusers of alcohol.

During his career he has ministered in Magnetawan, Barrie and Scarborough. He was an apprentice and journeyman electrician before being ordained a minister.

During the 1970s he had the opportunity to work with young people as executive director of Alcohol and Drug Concerns Inc. While he agreed that in the recent past there haven't been many young adults going to church, he sees a new trend.

"It's a more conservative era. Young people are returning to churches and becoming a stronger component," he said.

Among his strengths, he says are, "being able to get along well with people in a working situation and to understand people's hurts and needs in a pastoral sense."

Rev. Reeve is married for 30 years and has three children. He and his wife are adjusting to an "empty nest" since his daughter moved away to study law at the University of Western Ontario. His two sons are married.

Although he has been minister of Central United since Sept. 16, he will be formally inducted tomorrow, Sunday, Sept. 29 at Bethesda Lutheran Church at 7:30 p.m.
