

Regional chairman are 'underpaid,' says Herrema

Gary Herrema is underpaid as Durham Region's chairman while the 30 regional councillors earn better-than-average salaries, according to the findings of a report commissioned by Mr. Herrema.

The Uxbridge Township resident said he requested the personnel department to examine Durham's salary scale compared to those in other regional municipalities.

The recently-completed study won't be released until the Dec. 11 management committee meeting, but Mr. Herrema confirmed it shows he doesn't get nearly as much money as the majority of Ontario's other chairmen.

His yearly salary of $48,819 is approximately $10,600 less than most regional heads earn. But, according to chairman Herrema, council representatives from Durham's eight member municipalities make just over $15,000 — which is about $2,000 more than the average regional councillor receives in this province.

Mr. Herrema, who'll seek a third term as chairman at an inaugural meeting Dec. 4, said he feels Durham's regional boss should be paid above average.

Durham Region, with a total of more than 293,000 residents, ranks fourth in size among Ontario's 12 regions. Metro Toronto is the largest.
